THE OPERATIONS OF SATURDAY.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Saturday, Dec. 13, 1862. 10 MIN PAST—11 O'CLOCK, A. M.

The great battle, so long anticipated between the two contending armies, is now progressing.

The morning opened with a dense fog, which has not entirely disappeared.

Gen. REYNOLDS' Corps, on the left, advanced at an early hour, and at 9:15 A. M., engaged the enemy's infantry. Seven minutes afterward the whole opened a heavy fire of artillery, which has continued so far without intermission.

Their artillery fire must be at random, as the fog obstructs all view of almost everything.

Our heavy guns are answering them rapidly.

All this writing, no results are known.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Saturday Dec. 13—12 P. M.

The fog began to disappear early in the forenoon, affording an unobstructed view of our own and the rebel positions.

It being evident that the first ridge of hills, in the rear of the city, on which the enemy had their guns posted behind works, could not be carried, except by a charge of infantry, Gen. SUMNER assigned that duty to Gen. FRENCH's Division, which was supported by Gen. HOWARD'S.

The troops advanced to their work at ten minutes before 12 o'clock at a brisk run, the enemy's guns opening upon them a very rapid fire. When within musket range, at the base of the ridge, our troops were met by a terrible fire from the rebel infantry, who were posted behind a stone wall and some houses on the right of the line. This checked the advance of our men, and they fell back to a small ravine, but not out of musket range.

At this time another body of troops moved to their assistance in splendid style, notwithstanding large gaps were made in their ranks by the rebel artillery. When our troops arrived at the first line of the rebel defences they "dropped to pieces," and with "fixed bayonets" endeavored to dislodge the whole from their hiding places. The concentrated fire of the rebel artillery and infantry, which our men were forced to face, was too much for them, and the centre gave way in disorder, but afterwards they were rallied and brought back.

From that time the fire was spiritedly carried on, and never ceased until after dark.

Gen. FRANKLIN, who commanded the attack on the left, met with better success. He succeeded, after a hard day's fight, in driving the rebels about one mile. At one time the rebels advanced to attack him, but were handsomely repulsed, with terrible slaughter and loss of between four and five hundred prisoners belonging to Gen. A. P. HILL's command. Gen. FRANKLIN's movement was directed down the river, and his troops are encamped to-night not far from the Massaponax Creek.

Our troops sleep to-night where they fought to-day. The dead and wounded are being carried from the field.

The following is a list of officers killed and wounded so far as yet known:

Gen. JACKSON, of the Pennsylvania Reserves, killed.

Gen. BAYARD struck in the thigh by a shell, and afterward died.

Gen. TAYLOR wounded in the side, but not seriously.

Gen. GIBBON wounded in the hand.

Gen. KIMBALL wounded in the thigh.

Gen. CALDWELL wounded in two places, but not seriously.

Col. SINCLAIR, of the Pennsylvania Reserves, wounded seriously.

Capt. HENDERSON, commanding the Ninth New-York State Militia, wounded seriously.

The following is the loss of officers in the Fifth New-Hampshire Regiment:

Col. CROSS, wounded in the abdomen.
Major STUNSTAFFE, killed.
Adjutant DOAN, killed.
Capt. MURRAY, killed.
Capt. FOLLEY, killed.

The firing of musketry ceased about 6 o'clock this evening; but the Rebels continued throwing shell into the city until 8 o'clock.

The position of the rebels was as follows:

Gen. LONGSTREET on the left, and holding the main works.

Gen. A. P. HILL and "Stonewall" JACKSON were in front of Gen. FRANKLIN, with JACKSON's right resting on the Rappahannock, and HILL's forces acting as a reserve.

The troops are in good spirits and not the least disheartened.

FROM ABOVE FREDERICKSBURGH.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Saturday, Dec. 13—10 P. M.

Last night our troops were rapidly pushed across the river, and every preparation made for a battle. Gen. FRANKLIN's Division crossed two miles below the city, while Gen. SUMNER's troops occupied a portion of the town. Gen. FRANKLIN's line was moved forward at sunrise, with his right resting on Fredericksburgh, his centre advanced a mile from the river, and his left resting on the river three miles below.

Skirmishing commenced on the left about daylight. Soon after a rebel battery opened on our lines, and the Ninth New York Militia was ordered to charge, but after a fierce struggle was compelled to retire. The remainder of the Brigade, under Gen. TYLER, then charged the enemy's guns, when the fight became general on the extreme left.

Gen. MEAD'S and Gen. GRIFFIN'S Divisions encountered the right of Gen. A. P. HILL'S command.

The cannonading was terrific, though our troops suffered but little from the enemy's artillery. Gradually the fight extended around to the right. Gen. HOWE'S division went in, and then Gen. BROOKS' division. About 10 o'clock A. M. Gen. SUMNER'S troops engaged the enemy back of the city, since which time the battle has raged furiously along the whole line. The enemy, occupying the woods and hills, had a much more advantageous position, but were driven back on their right a mile and a half early in the day.

About noon Gen. GIBBON was relieved by Gen. DOUBLEDAY, and Gen. MEAD by Gen. STONEMAN. Afterward Gen. NEWTON's Division moved round to the support of the left, when the firing ceased in that portion of the field for a short time, and broke out with greater fierceness in the centre, where our troops were exposed to a plunging fire from the enemy's guns and earthworks from the hills.

Along the whole line the battle has been fierce all day, with great loss to both sides. To-night each army holds its first position, with the exception of a slight advance of our left. Cannonading is still going on, and the musketry breaks out at intervals quite fiercely.

Gens. GIBBON, VINTON, BAYARD and CAMPBELL are wounded. Gen. BAYARD was struck in the hip by a solid shot, while conversing with Gen. FRANKLIN and his Staff, and cannot survive. His right leg has been amputated, but the operation will only serve to prolong his life a short time.

Several hundred prisoners have been taken, who report that Gen. LEE's entire army is in the immediate vicinity. Gen. HILL's troops were withdrawn this morning and started down the river, but afterwards retraced. Gen. FRANKLIN is to-night opposed to STONEWALL JACKSON.

It is impossible to form an accurate idea of the loss on either side, as the firing is still going on, rendering it extremely difficult to remove the killed and wounded.

The city suffered terribly from the enemy's artillery, and is crowded with our troops, the front extending but a short distance beyond.

The balloon has been up all day. During the morning but little could be seen, owing to the dense fog; but the afternoon was remarkably clear.

This evening the rebels have been shelling Fredericksburgh, endeavoring to drive our troops out of the place, but without success.

THE OPERATIONS OF SUNDAY.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF POTOMAC, Dec. 14—11:30 A. M.

There is no fog to-day, the sun shining brightly, with a strong breeze. At daylight this morning there was a heavy fire of artillery and infantry in front of the first line of works, where Gens. SUMNER and HOOKER were engaged yesterday. The fire slacked about an hour afterward, and was heard only at intervals until now. The same occurred in front of Gen. FRANKLIN'S Division down the river. The object of both parties was evidently to feel the other.

During last night and this forenoon the rebels have considerably extended their works and strengthened their position. Large bodies of troops are now to be seen where but few were to be seen yesterday.

Our dead which were killed yesterday, while charging in front of the enemy's works, still remain where they fell. When attempting their removal last night, the rebels would open fire with infantry, but the wounded have all been removed from the field, and all the dead obtained are now being buried.

The indications are that no decisive battle will be fought to-day, unless the rebels should bring on the engagement, which they will not probably do.

REPORTS BY WAY OF WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Dec. 14.

It is thought here that about 40,000 of our troops were engaged in yesterday's battle.

From information received early this morning, preparations were making all night for a conflict to-day, Gen. BURNSIDE remaining on the field, giving orders, looking to the position and condition of his forces.

Additional surgeons, and everything which the necessities of the wounded require, have been dispatched from Washington to the battle-ground.

It is proper to caution the public against hastily crediting the many unsupported rumors concerning yesterday's battle. Some of them have prevalent have no other basis than surmise, and are more inventions in the absence of facts. Rebel sympathizers are responsible for not a few of these fictions.

Gentlemen in high public positions repeat the assertion, as coming from Gen. BURNSIDE, that he has men enough, and, therefore, desires no further reinforcements.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Details of Operations to Saturday Morning.

The Crossing of the Rappahannock—The Movement Splendidly Performed—Preponderance of the Union Forces—Condition of Fredericksburgh, &c., &c.

CAMP OPPOSITE FREDERICKSBURGH, Saturday, Dec. 13, 1862.

Affairs are rapidly culminating here, and the crisis of battle, the grandest—probably the most decisive—of the war, approaches apace.

The nation may well pause and hold its breath, in the terrible suspense now impending. The prelude of the conflict has passed. The taking of the town by assault, and after a determined fight with the enemy's sharpshooters and skirmishers, and the crossing of the river by a considerable portion of the Union force, are fast bringing the two great armies face to face. To-day—to-morrow at furthest—must witness events which will long live in history. May we hope that the battle will be as decisive as it now promises to be bloody and terrible.

The events of yesterday may be briefly summed up as follows:

Gen. SUMNER'S Corps, the Eight Grand Division, were across and occupied the town; one Division took possession the first night, and the remainder of the column passed across the upper bridges in the morning. They filled the whole length of Caroline or Main-street to the lines of the railroad, and by degrees extended their front to Commerce-street, and the streets running up from the river, until the body of the town was filled up. They remained under cover of the houses, the streets running nearly North and South being parallel to the line of the enemies' batteries behind the town. The completion of a second pontoon bridge during the first night greatly facilitated the passage of the troops. The first artillery thrown across were the Napoleon batteries attached to Gen. SUMNER'S Division.

The enemy's pickets stubbornly occupied the outskirts of the town, and a fusillade between them and our own advance pickets was kept up during the day. The remainder of FRANKLIN'S column crossed their two pontoon bridges during the forenoon, two miles below the centre of the town. Their passage, as well as that of Gen. SUMNER'S Corps, was disputed by occasional but not very persistent firing from the rebel batteries, which are chiefly to the South and rear of the town, so as to command the line of the railroad, and also the Bowling Green.

Gen. REYNOLDS' First Corps brought up the rear of FRANKLIN'S column, and occupied the broad plateau South of the town, extending for miles down the river.

Gen. HOOKER'S Grand Division, which had been on foot since Thursday, when they broke camp, remained with the head of its column pointed toward the upper bridges, but up to 3 o'clock awaited Gen. BURNSIDE'S orders to advance.

Three times during the day the enemy's battery commanding this crossing opened fire upon the troops which came down, their shells exploding with uncomfortable accuracy just at the higher end of the bridge, on the slope of the hill, and even beyond on the level plain by which they approached.

Shortly after 3 P. M. HOOKER'S column began to move down the river, as if with the design of crossing on the bridges below, where FRANKLIN crossed. Up to a late hour, however, they had not gone over. It is believed they passed the river during the night.

This change in the line was no doubt occasioned by the extraordinary activity displayed by the rebel batteries southeast of the town.

At 2½ P. M. the whole semi-circle of batteries in that direction opened fire upon the pontoon bridges, and upon the lower part of the town, where our troops were quartered. Their other batteries, north of the plank-road, and toward Falmouth, simultaneously poured in their contribution upon the upper crossing, and that part of the town lying in front of it.

Five separate batteries below, working ten or twelve guns, and four above, with eight or ten, kept up a fire of shot and shell until near sundown. Many of their shells fell short, but some took effect in the town, and near the river. What damage they did to the troops I could not learn at that late hour.

Several shells burst near the Lacey House, and one close by the north end of the building while I was getting the names of the wounded lying in that place. One man, a few minutes afterward, was brought in with his arm terribly shattered by a piece of shell. A considerable body of cavalry and infantry were partially sheltered behind these buildings, which are of brick. It being used as a hospital, and occupied by the rebels in common with the Union wounded soldiers is a guarantee (?) that it will be respected. Its position being only a little to the left of the crossing, and nearly in line of one of the main rebel batteries, probably accounts for these shells bursting so near it.

We must presume that they were accidental shots, as I believe there is no well authenticated instance of their intentionally firing upon a hospital. It is situated only two hundred yards north of Lieut. MILLER'S battery, which is protected by earthworks, and very prominent on the high land below the house. These circumstances render the place unsafe, and it will only be used as a temporary hospital. The wounded will, for the present, be carried to the rear, where tents have been established for their accommodation.

The main body of the rebel army is believed to be in position some five or six, perhaps ten miles west, with a strong rear guard for cooperating with and supporting their batteries.

If estimates which I have heard be correct, we have an aggregate of over sixty thousand men more than the estimated strength of the rebel army. Our artillery figures up over five hundred guns. Considering the difficulties of this position, the completion of six pontoon bridges, and the crossing of such an army in twenty-four hours, is worthy of all military achievement. The events of the last two days have increased the enthusiasm of the whole army toward its Commanders, and strengthened confidence in the Generals leading the Grand Divisions. With town and river behind we must fight—there is no backing out.

THE TOWN—ITS CONDITION.

Our shot and shell have riddled a great many of the houses in town; and most of the churches, from foundation to steeple, have been accidentally perforated by the storm of missiles which were sent into the town. As the monuments and representatives of a priesthood and people thoroughly baptized in treason, they deserved no exemption from the common doom, but being larger than any other buildings, and very prominently in the range of our fire, they naturally received their full share of the iron storm. The clock in the steeple of the Episcopal church was untouched, and continues to toll off the eventful hours, for the benefit of the Union forces in the town.

In spite of prompt and general efforts to guard the houses from intrusion and pillage, by the establishment of guards, a good many residences have suffered more or less spoliation. Household articles, such as cooking utensils and crockery, pickles, sweetmeats and flitches of bacon, were observed among the troops, as I passed through the different streets. The latter, taken from the most houses of the first families, no doubt were generally transfixed on the end of bayonets, and carried in triumph on their shoulders.

There has been, as yet, no general pillaging of the town, and it will not be permitted. The principal stores have each a strong guard to protect the small stock of goods left behind in the flight of their proprietors.

Not over twenty houses all told, have been burned, and the total damage to the place, by the bombardment and flames, I estimate at not over two hundred thousand dollars.

The few dead, who were shot in the streets, have been buried, necessarily in the town, near where they fell. Considering all the terrible circumstances of provocation, the preservation of the town from total destruction, and its wholesale pillage by the army, are in the highest degree creditable to the Union troops, and to their discipline. Inclosed is a list of the killed and wounded so far as ascertained.

In haste to send the mail. R. S.

Details of the Crossing of Gen. Franklin's Command Below Fredericksburg.

BURNSIDE'S PLANTATION, ONE MILE AND A HALF BELOW FREDERICKSBURGH, Friday Evening, Midnight, Dec. 12, 1862.

At sunset last evening the first troops of the left wing of the army crossed to this side of the Rappahannock. Gen. NEWTON'S Division came over, the second Rhode-Island being in the advance and moving in "double quick." It was a most beautiful and imposing sight, and the cheer after cheer which arose from those in the rear as their comrades passed the river in safety, made us forget that this is indeed war.

Gen. NEWTON'S Division had been over but a short time before an order was received from Gen. BURNSIDE, directing them all to return with the exception of the First Brigade, which remained. This brigade is commanded by Brig.-Gen. DEVIN, of Massachusetts, and consists of the following regiments: Seventh Massachusetts, Col. RUSSELL; Eleventh Massachusetts, Col. EURIES; Second Rhode-Island, Brig.-Gen. WEBSTER; Thirty-sixth New-York, Col. BROWER; and Thirty-seventh Massachusetts.

Very early this morning, Gen. FRANKLIN'S entire command, consisting of BURK'S and REYNOLDS' corps, commenced crossing. Gen. BURK'S force came over first, all reaching this side before 9 o'clock. By noon all of Gen. REYNOLDS' command was also over. The ground occupied consists of a wide plain, stretching out for two miles or more, bounded on the north by Fredericksburgh, east by the Rappahannock, south by a small stream emptying in the Rappahannock, and west by the range of hills occupied by the enemy. The ground, marshy in some places, ascends gradually from the river for nearly half a mile, when there is considerable of an elevation.

At sunrise this morning, Company A, Twenty-third Pennsylvania, were thrown out as skirmishers. They were relieved by the Sixth Vermont, Col. LOOS, after the expiration of two hours. Though considerable firing took place, no one was injured on our side. The enemy's skirmishers fell back on our advance.

About 9 o'clock, a portion of Gen. BURK'S Corps were drawn up in line of battle, facing to the west, Gen. PEAVY'S Brigade being on the extreme left, which extended to the building where I am now writing. The force moved forward gradually, offering battle to the enemy, if any there should be. As Gen. REYNOLDS' Corps came over, Gen. GIBBONS' Division proceeded to the left, and were formed in line of battle, facing to the south. Skirmishers were here thrown out in front, also, who gradually moved southward, but found no enemy save a few skirmishers, who, after delivering a few volleys of musketry, disappeared. Gen. DOUBLEDAY and MEADE's Division remained in the rear, resting on the river side, near the First

Second and Third Vermont Regiments, Vermont Brigade, Howe's Division, Sumner's Corps. About 11 o'clock, the first man on our side was wounded, JOHN S. HEAVEN, Company E, Thirty-third New-York. A stray ball from the enemy's sharpshooters struck him in the right leg, and, fracturing the bone, made amputation necessary. This was the only casualty on our side during the forenoon. Our batteries were planted, two on the extreme right, facing the enemy's batteries, above Fredericksburgh; one on the west, another to the south, while the remaining guns belonging to this division were located on the plain, at different points, ready to return the fire of the rebels, should they open upon us. About 3 o'clock, the Second Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves were moved down across the stream, being shown to their position for the day, prepared to repel any attempts of the enemy to approach in that direction, and during the forenoon, from several guns in their immediate front, on our batteries facing in that direction, which immediately limbering up, moved several rods further to the front, and returned the fire. Several of our guns on the opposite side of the river also returned the fire. The artillery duel was kept up for some time, resulting in the wounding of some of our men. Gen. BURNSIDE rode out among the troops just before dusk, and was received with tremendous cheering by the troops, who are in the best of spirits. The Fifteenth New-York Engineers commenced laying a third bridge near this point about 8 o'clock, but were called off to throw one across the river near Fredericksburgh. The two bridges already completed are guarded by the Seventh Indiana, Col. GAVIN; Seventy-sixth New-York, Col. WADSWORTH; Fifty-sixth New-York, Lieut.-Col. NEWMAN; and Ninety-fifth New-York, Col. HOFFMAN. The forces to-night occupy the following positions: Gen. BURNS'S corps, to the front and right; Gen. NEWTON'S division resting on the river; and Gen. REYNOLDS' corps to the rear and southward. This mansion is occupied by a wealthy secessionist—BURNARD, by name—who is now a prisoner here. It is occupied as a hospital for General SMITH'S division, and in charge of Drs. BIRDSEY and HALE. It is the general impression that the enemy have proceeded in the direction of Richmond, leaving a small rearguard to dispute our advance. A rumor to the effect that Fort Darling has been taken, occasions much joy among the men, who are disposed to give it credence.

REBEL ACCOUNTS FROM FREDERICKSBURGH.

FORTRESS MONROE, Saturday, Dec. 13, Via Baltimore, Sunday, Dec. 14.

The Richmond Inquirer, of the 11th, has the following:

"Heavy firing is going on at Fredericksburgh. Longstreet's troops are engaged. The cannonading is severe. On Thursday last, our batteries stationed below the town opened fire on the gunboats anchored in the stream, consisting of the Pontoons, Anacosta, Zoe Yonker and Reindeer.

"The firing lasted an hour and a half, and was very heavy and rapid. Eleven houses were struck, and four completely riddled—the best in the village. No notice was given of an intention to shell. After the bombardment, the gunboats dropped down the river some miles. The people of the town, like those of Fredericksburgh, are now scattered in the farmhouses and cabins of the adjacent country.

"Truly, the Yankees are waging a war of extermination. ABRAHAM LINCOLN is a fit conqueror for NOAH SABIN."

IMPORTANT REBEL NEWS.

Movements of the National Forces in North Carolina.

An Attack Expected at Weldon and Petersburgh.

The following important items of news are from the Richmond Dispatch of the 12th inst.:

Important movements are on foot in Eastern North Carolina. Twelve regiments left Newbern on Saturday. Some think their destination is Wilmington. The more general belief is, that they design to attack Weldon and Petersburgh. Six heavy two-horse wagons and five gunboats ascended the Chowan River, and a land force of ten thousand were seen in motion from Suffolk, indicating a movement on Weldon.

The Raleigh Progress announces the landing of a large Federal force in Gates County. If this be true, an immediate attack on Weldon may be expected.

GEN. DAVIS AT HOGANVILLE.

HOGANVILLE, Tenn., Thursday, Dec. 11.

GOOD SIGNS IN GEORGIA.

Governor BROWN, of Georgia, acting under the authority of the Legislature of that State, has advised from $200,000 to $300,000 worth of goods in Augusta for the use of the soldiers, to be paid for, of course, at reasonable rates. It has caused great enthusiasm.

Col. LEONIDAS M. LAMAR will shortly sail for Europe, accompanied by Col. L. Q. C. LAMAR, of Mississippi, who goes with instructions to Messrs. PRIOLEAU and MASON.

Arrivals in the City.

Gen. McClellan returned to this City on Friday evening last, at a very late hour. He was recognized upon his arrival at the Jersey City Depot by the crowd, who manifested their appreciation of his presence by vociferous cheering. The General acknowledged the recognition in a quiet manner, after which he proceeded across the river to Cortlandt-street, and was driven directly to the Fifth-avenue Hotel. He was accompanied home by Lieut.-Col. Rucker, one of the members of his Staff.

Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson, Albany; Hon. R. C. Chaffee (Ex-Member of Congress), Iron Bridge, Michigan; Mid. Watson, U. S. A., are registered at the Fifth-avenue Hotel.

Hon. Chauncey Vibbard, from Schenectady; J. N. Williams, New-Orleans; and Charles B. Wills, Philadelphia, are stopping at the St. Nicholas Hotel.

Col. Hardie, of the Penna. Reserves; Lieut. Whiting, U. S. Coast Survey; Lieut.-Col. W. A. Wentworth, of the Twenty-seventh Maine Regiment; Wm. Gillespie, U. S. Navy; and Dr. J. Homans, Jr., U. S. Army, are at the Astor House.

INTERESTING FROM PORT ROYAL.

The Execution of William W. Lunt, of the Ninth Maine Regiment, for Desertion and Highway Robbery.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HILTON HEAD, S. C., MONDAY, DEC. 1, 1862.

This morning, WILLIAM W. LUNT, a private, last of the Ninth Maine Regiment, was put to death by the regular manner prescribed by martial law for the crime of desertion to the enemy. Military execution too of such rare occurrence, and the mode of conducting them so entirely a matter of ceremony, that I shall not apologize for writing a little more in detail, and of the perfect arrangements for carrying out the dread sentence of the law.

THE PRISONER'S APPRENTICESHIP.

Lunt was born at Hancock, Me., near Bangor, of respectable parents, who had considerable property, which enabled him the advantages of a common school education. He was not, however, willing to profit by proper teaching, and early betrayed a contrariness which led him to have very opinions of original view. At the age of [illegible] he left home for the purpose of [illegible] his fortune in the world, but after the breaking out of the war, and changed, in contravention of the army regulations, which forbid the enlistment of a man who has been convicted of a criminal offence, to connect himself with the Ninth Regiment of Maine Volunteers, Col. Rice, as a private in Co. I. In personal appearance he was a remarkable man. More than six feet in height, and of a proportionately large frame, sinewy and compact, he seemed the very perfection of physical conformation, but there could be no mistaking the impress which sensuality had left upon his face. He was scarcely 21 years of age.

WHERE THE CRIME WAS COMMITTED.

Within a week or two after the occupation of the ports on the Florida coast by our forces, in March last, LUNT deserted to the enemy from his regiment, which was stationed at Fernandina. From information which he is said to have given, an attack was made upon a house which was used as a station by our pickets, resulting in the killing of one man and the capture of seven others. But LUNT's conduct with the rebels was so bad, that even they refused to have his company, and returned him to our lines, with the request that we prevent him from ever coming within their picket lines again. He was charged with the theft of a watch belonging to the Major of a Florida regiment, and also, with stealing $250 from a woman he met on the way to our lines in search of her husband who had been taken prisoner by our soldiers. For this latter offence, and for the graver crime, in some of its aspects, of deserting, the prisoner was tried before a General Court-martial, convened at St. Augustine, of which Col. (now Brigadier-General) TERRY, of the Seventh Connecticut Regiment, was President, and convicted of the following complaints and their specifications:

CHARGE I.—Desertion.—Specification.—In this, that the said private WILLIAM W. LUNT, Company I, Ninth Maine Regiment, stationed at Fernandina, Fla., at the time of the offence hereinafter was committed, did desert from the United States army, and go to the enemy's lines, without arms and accoutrements. This at Fernandina, Fla., on or about the 7th of April.

CHARGE II.—Highway Robbery.—Specification.—In this, that the said WILLIAM W. LUNT, Company I, Ninth Maine Regiment, near the railroad bridge, called Lawton's, on a railroad running from Fernandina to Baldwin, Fla., did forcibly take from Mrs. Susan Mounce, money to the amount of two hundred and sixty-eight dollars, more or less. This at Fernandina, Fla., on or about the 8th of April, 1862.

LUNT's sentence was "to be shot to death at such time and place as the commanding general may direct," but in accordance with an act of the last Congress, applying to such cases, the evidence and findings of the Court were sent to Washington for examination and approval by the President. Meanwhile, the prisoner was brought from St. Augustine to Hilton Head, the Headquarters of the Department, and placed in custody of Major NAT. BAYLY, the Provost-Marshal of the Post; but from the date of his conviction he showed no anxiety approaching to indifference respecting his fate.

Two weeks since an order authorizing the execution of the sentence of the Court, was received from the War Department by Gen. HUNTER, and Monday, the 1st inst., was then announced as the time for carrying it into effect. LUNT was informed that he must no longer entertain hope of a reprieve, and warned to spend the few days which remained to him of this life in preparation for that to come. The announcement he received carelessly—almost with insolent derision—saying that he might as well die at one time as at another. In hopes, however, that his mind might be turned to reflection, he was removed from his cell in the prison building, and confined under a strict guard in a tent which was pitched in an isolated part of the Provost-Marshal's encampment, expressly for his occupancy. Here, undisturbed by external things in the course of a few days, under the earnest ministrations of the Rev. Mr. BUTTS, Chaplain of the Forty-seventh New-York Regiment, LUNT underwent, to all outward appearance, a marvelous change. Sullenness took the place of levity, and his whole nature was softened by the desire to experience the forgiveness of that good Being whom mercy and grace he was taught was all-sufficient for the vilest of his creatures. It was not until four days before the execution that he professed to see clearly the way of salvation, and expressed himself as at peace with his Maker and with the world. It is certain that thereafter, and until the very last, he maintained an imperturbability of deportment which seemed almost impossible; and in view of this, who shall question the genuineness of his faith in the incomprehensible love of the Almighty?

A VISIT TO THE PRISONER.

Saturday afternoon, I received a note from the Provost-Marshal, inviting me to visit the prisoner, who had expressed a desire to see a representative of the Press. Trusting to the plea of service, I overcame a natural reluctance to call upon a person in his condition, and had the interview. I found him perfectly composed, and during more than an hour that I passed with him, not once did he lose his remarkable self-possession. Conversing on his personal affairs, his own calmness completely brought me out of the painful state in which sympathy for him had thrown me, and I left him with the impression upon my mind that he fully understood what his fate must be, and was prepared to meet it without fear.

His object in sending for me was to request that I would publish to the world his protestations of innocence of the crime of desertion. Handing me six pages and a half of closely written foolscap, he told me that his defence was contained there, and asked me to print the paper either in the form in which he had put it, or in substance, as might seem best in my judgment. Divested of its verbiage, the statement is to the effect that he had been sent three miles beyond our lines by one of our officers, on an improper errand connected with a woman whose existence was made known to them on the previous day while they were scouting. When at the house of this woman, he was in danger of being surprised by a party of our own troops, which would have placed him in difficulty, and to avoid them he pressed on further, intending to stop at a house which he had before visited. On his way thither he came upon a squad of rebel cavalry, and was taken prisoner. His statement offers nothing in extenuation of the highway robbery which he committed before falling into the hands of the rebels, but says that as far as the theft of the Major's watch was concerned, he did not consider that wrong, as it was filched while that officer had him under guard and was searching his pockets. In addition to this written statement, LUNT made every endeavor verbally to explain away the evidence of his desertion. He said—"I am willing to die, and it is a great deal better to die innocent than guilty. For the sake of my family I want it to be published that I am innocent. Tell my fellow-soldiers that I have been a hard boy, and have done a good many wicked things, and they must take my death as a warning not to be led astray by bad company." When warned by Mr. BUTTS of his inability to deceive God, although it was very easy to deceive his fellow-men, and besought not to leave the world with a lie upon his lips, he said that his innocence was a solemn truth, and the witnesses upon whose testimony he was convicted had sworn falsely, adding, "but I have no ill-feeling toward them. I am resigned to my fate." And he obstinately adhered to the statement that he was guiltless, notwithstanding the proof against him, if human reason is to be trusted, is indubitably to the contrary. Before I left him he handed me another slip of paper containing the following, asking to have it published. It will be observed that it is signed ALBERT W. LUNT, which was probably the real name of the prisoner, who enlisted, however, as WILLIAM W. LUNT.

HILTON HEAD, S. C., 1862.

I'm about to suffer death, which punishment I am willing to bear for a warning to others which may be led astray by bad company. Fellow-soldiers, you should take warning by me and keep out of bad company, and shun everything that is bad. Keep good company, and you will be respected by your worst enemies.

Oh! may God bless the officers of the Forty-seventh New-York Regiment for the kindness they have shown me, a wicked sinner. They have done everything that was in their power, and they brought me tracts to read and religious papers that led me the right road to my Savior. Oh! may God help and sustain them through the peril of the battles, that they may come out victorious in them all, and God speed the time when peace shall once more be, and the friends that is here at war will be going home to their families. ALBERT W. LUNT.

THE DELINQUENT'S LAST HOURS.

Attended by Chaplain BUTTS and Rev. Mr. HILL, of the Third New-Hampshire Regiment, the prisoner passed the night, until 2 o'clock, in devotion, when he slept soundly several hours. Eleven o'clock was fixed as the time for the execution, and during the slow hours which intervened after he was awakened, to the moment when he was called out of his tent to enter the ambulance which was to carry him to the place where his life was to be forfeited—hours of which each minute must seem a year—he evidenced no nervousness, and expressed no emotion but resignation and trust in the forgiveness of the Almighty.

All the preparations having been made, at 10½ o'clock the prisoner, in uniform, stepped from his tent, walking firmly to the ambulance, under a guard of two men with side arms. The vehicle was in the centre of a square, formed by the firing party of twenty-four men of the Provost-Guard, under Capt. EDDY, posted at open order, with pieces reversed. LUNT passed within the cordon of soldiers and entered the ambulance sedately and unaided, seating himself upon the rough coffin which was destined for his remains, and exhibiting that remarkable fortitude which had previously characterized him—not a blanch of the face nor a tremor of the frame. At the command of the Provost-Marshal, the sorrowful procession then moved, with an escort of the Forty-seventh New-York in the van, and in rear the attending chaplains and a number of medical officers who were to certify to the proper execution of the sentence. Half an hour's slow marching to the mournful tap of muffled drums—who can tell how long it was to him upon the coffin?—brought the procession to the place selected for the execution. This was a spacious field, just outside the line of intrenchments which traverses the island, affording an excellent opportunity to the entire troops of the post to witness the awful death to which their late comrade was condemned. Here, drawn up in line, forming three sides of a hollow square, were the soldiers, under command of Brig.-Gen. TERRY, silently awaiting the awful event—veterans, undaunted in battle, but now timorous and stricken with dread. Near the centre of the square, Gen. TERRY, his personal Staff, and several prominent officers, had taken a station, and the procession was halted directly opposite this point, a little within the open side of the square. The prisoner, who until now had remained motionless, in the attitude which he had taken on entering the vehicle—his face reclining upon his right hand, and his elbow supported upon his knee, no dampness upon his brow, no tears upon his cheek—alighted without assistance, and his coffin was placed beside him. The charges upon which he was convicted, and the sentence of the Court, were then distinctly read by Lieut. GALLEE, Adjutant of the Provost-Guard, and LUNT apparently listened with attention. This being finished, Maj. VAN BRUNT addressed the prisoner, remarking that it only remained for him to see that the sentence was executed, but offering him an opportunity to speak if he desired. The prisoner thereupon spoke in a loud, clear tone, as follows:

FELLOW SOLDIERS: I want you to take warning by me, and seek salvation from the Lord before it is too late. I am not guilty of the crime which I am condemned to death for.

Having spoken thus, his overcoat was taken off, and obeying Major VAN BRUNT's direction, he knelt upon his coffin. In this position a bandage was fastened over his eyes, and at the same moment a squad of twelve men were silently motioned to post themselves in front of him at a distance of fifteen paces. While the attention of the culprit was engaged by the Chaplains in a brief prayer, the moment was seized for cocking the muskets, the loud clicking of which was probably unheard by the poor fellow, whose last words were an expression of perfect resignation to his fate.

THE EXECUTION.

Major VAN BRUNT then shakes the prisoner's hand and steps back. Capt. EDDY, by a wave of his sword brings his men to the position of "ready aim." The spectators feel a thrill of agony. The Major now drops his pocket handkerchief, (the signal to fire), and that word, (the only verbal order given), is promptly uttered by Capt. EDDY. Then a loud report—an instant's pause of the kneeling figure on the coffin—a flashing as if by magical power of six or eight dark blotches upon the body—and the offender lies lifeless upon the ground. There is no need of the reserve of twelve men who, with loaded muskets, takes the places vacated by those who have just fired. The surgeons examine the body and pronounce life to be extinct. One ball passed through the right humerus; two passed through the right lung, about two inches and a half below the clavicle; one passed an inch below the apex of the heart and to the left; three passed in a transverse line, at nearly equal distances, through the abdomen, about an inch and a half above the umbilicus; one in the median line, about two inches below the umbilicus, and one in the median line, just above the pubes. Eight of these balls passed entirely through the body; one of the lower ones passed through the os innominata to the right side, lodging under the integuments. There is no doubt of the instantaneous death of the condemned. He was killed by the shock upon his nervous system. The body was at once placed in the coffin and removed to the grave-yard, under the charge of six soldiers, the usual funeral honors being withheld, and the barbarous custom of allowing the corpse to lie where it fell until the entire command should march by, also being dispensed with. This was the second execution which has taken place under such circumstances since the commencement of the war—the first being JOHNSON's, a cavalry soldier, attached to the Army of the Potomac.

THE PERFECT ARRANGEMENTS.

There was no mismanagement. The arrangements were excellently planned and skillfully executed. Not a point was omitted which might add to the solemnity of the occasion so an example, nor a detail forgotten wherein humanity toward the prisoner might be exhibited. The firing party was selected by the Provost-Marshal with a view to nerve and good marksmanship, and to make sure that this painful duty should be mercifully performed there was long preparation by target-practice at the designed distance. That the men faithfully did their unpleasant part, is shown by the fact that of ten shots fired only one pierced the culprit. The cap of one musket exploded without discharging the piece, and the twelfth musket was loaded only with a blank cartridge and heavy wad, in order that as the pieces were handed to the men, none could determine to whom fell the blank. Gen. TERRY wisely refused permission to civilians to see the execution, and neither the order nor impressiveness of the event were disturbed by the presence of those whom a depraved taste would have drawn to the scene. FROM NASHVILLE TO LOUISVILLE.

The New Bridge over the Cumberland—A Region of Desolation—How Morgan Escapes—By the Way—The Real Sentiments of the South.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Dec. 7, 1862.

It is a bright cold morning, this 7th day of December, as I enter the depôt of the only railroad now in operation in Nashville, bound for Louisville. Only one car door is allowed to be opened for the ingress of passengers, and at that are two soldiers, with bayonets. An officer examines the passes of the passengers, and if they are not regularly signed, and countersigned, they are not allowed to leave. At 8 o'clock, precisely, we moved off, soon crossing the extensive bridge spanning the Cumberland. This structure is fully equal to the one destroyed by FLOYD last February, and is one of the finest specimens of bridge building in the country. The river is now 150 feet below us, and there is not water enough yet to float the lightest draft boat over the shoals twenty miles below the town. A little below this bridge lies the new Government boat, the W. H. Sidel, named for Gen. Buell's A. A. A. G. We soon leave Edgefield, a suburb of Nashville, behind, and here we have the first indication of MORGAN's last visit. Four passenger cars lie, partially demolished, by the side of the track, and a black pile of timbers indicates the former location of the Edgefield depôt.

Arriving at Gallatin, I saw long trains of army wagons being loaded with supplies for the various camps between this town and Nashville. The whole country about this place is a picture of desolation; but few dwelling houses are to be seen, and they appear denuded of everything which makes life comfortable. No stacks of hay or corn are visible in the fields, scarcely a fence within the limit of vision is discernable. The weather-beaten tents of the soldiers and the shivering groups huddled around the platform and the fires, with now and then a cavalry man on a jaded horse, prancing up and down the road, are the only indications of military occupation. Just above Gallatin are the tunnels, whose destruction by MORGAN caused our troops and the Railroad Company so much trouble and expense. These tunnels are cut through the solid rock, and braced and supported by heavy timbers. The darkness in the longest of these excavations can be felt, and, as the train moved onward, the occasional soldier, standing among the broken rocks, lantern in hand, seemed the presiding genius of the infernal regions.

Gen. GRANGER occupies Bowling Green at present with a considerable force; among them are the cavalry commanded by Col. BAUER, whose frequent dashes have somewhat disconcerted the rebels in this vicinity. He has just returned from an unsuccessful attempt to capture the notorious WOODWARD, pursuing him with a part of his command as far as Clarksville, Tenn. WOODWARD, however, escaped, crossing the Cumberland in the direction of Charlotte, Tenn. Fears are entertained that MORGAN is about to make another raid upon the trains on this road, as he is reported to have recently crossed the Cumberland with a large force for that purpose. It seems as though some arrangement might be made by which this bold marauder could be captured. The apologies often made for his frequent escapes from superior numbers are that his men are better mounted than ours, and better riders. This argument is not true when applied to the force under Col. BAUER, as they are splendidly mounted and equipped, and the men are fully equal to MORGAN's in point of horsemanship. I predict that if a chance occurs to destroy MORGAN's force BAUER is the man to improve it. At this station three freight trains passed us on the way to Nashville, loaded with army supplies—nothing else is at present allowed to pass as freight, and the Adams Express is consequently crowded with goods of all descriptions. The General commanding the Department of the Cumberland is determined that no goods shall find their way to the enemy. Already unscrupulous parties have been detected in forwarding goods contraband of war, and several cases of such articles were detained last week in the Nashville office.

Although the road is in working order, yet the running time is much longer than formerly, owing to the destruction of the water-tanks along the road. At Richland station, above Gallatin, we were detained over two hours, waiting for that necessary element, gaining thereby a passenger who had endeavored four miles below to induce the train to stop, and, not succeeding, started on foot and finally overtook it.

At Cave City, twenty minutes are allowed for dinner, and the hungry passengers (at 4 P. M.) sit down in a dark room to appease the appetite created by an eight-hour ride. I made an excellent meal of some ancient mutton—cooked with the wool on it—and a couple of pickles, for which I paid half a dollar.

This Cave City is the most dismal place imaginable; a horse-pond near the hotel ornaments the foreground, and a few tents are dotted over the fields, with fires burning before and groups of soldiers warming themselves around them. A noticeable feature of the places passed through on this part of the road, is the entire absence of male inhabitants. Formerly a crowd of citizens were gazing open-mouthed at all the stations and along the road; but none are now to be seen at their former haunts since BRAGG passed through Kentucky. In fact, in this section, all are soldiers, either in the National or rebel armies.

It was dark before reaching Green River, but the blazing camp fires upon both banks of the stream afforded light enough to convince me that the force left to protect the bridge was sufficient to defeat it against any rebel attack.

Munfordville and Elizabethtown were soon passed, and at 10 P. M. we arrived, without accident, at Louisville, after a trip of fourteen hours. This road, which has suffered from the rebellion perhaps more than any other in the West, is now the only avenue for supplies to reach the army of the Cumberland; vigorous measures, consequently, have been adopted to guard against any future attacks upon it. There is not a bridge or a culvert that has not its guards; and it may safely be presumed, notwithstanding the rumors prevalent in relation to its again being destroyed, that the rebels will never have the power to interrupt again its operations. For the benefit of parties traveling in this direction, I append the following, which appears in a Louisville paper of to-day:

"It will be seen by the above that 'absolute necessity' alone will entitle parties to visit the 'City of Rocks,' and that the fair sex are to be kept out altogether. These measures, severe as they are, have become absolutely needful to check the stream of travel now rushing toward Nashville and to the camps, and beyond them."

Gen. ROSECRANS is as determined not to allow information of his movements to reach the enemy as he is to leave no enemies in his rear. To enforce his policy as to the latter, he has required all those who have been disloyal to the Government to come forward and take the oath, and give bonds with surety for future good behavior. This entitles parties so doing to a guarantee of protection from the United States. Numbers of the people have complied with the request, and are doing so every day. This is very well, but in my opinion the work of quelling the rebellion should begin with the rebels now in arms; first whip them out, and those who are disloyal and who stay at home, will be dealt with by the civil authority.

It is now apparent that the rebellious part of the South are generally destitute of loyalty. The sentiment does not exist to any considerable degree among those who have actively participated in the revolution. It may be said with equal truth that there is no patriotism. To those in whom these feelings burn so warmly as to be willing to imperil life and all its attendants, it may appear very singular. But to those conversant with the system of education and politics of the South it is by no means a mystery. In this country the people form their political opinions from the hustings, and receive all their political information from the same source. Candidates appeal to those feelings that are most likely to inflame passion and blind the judgment. Thus, instead of conscience being cultivated, self interest is stimulated. Instead of the culture of the mere kindly virtues and the higher sentiments, the violent impulses prevail. As no feeling of the mind is more easily cultivated and inflamed, and more liable to abuse, than the love of property, it has been stimulated until it has taken the deepest foothold on the whole body of society. Thus have a whole people merged all the ornaments of life into the useful. This has been done to the neglect of all the unbought elements of the soul. Country is an object of love so far as as it is an object of property. When Government ceases to be property, it ceases to be of any merit.

Years must elapse ere these people will love the United States as their country. Such a result can alone be attained by education and that of a whole generation. While these people cannot soon become loyal, they can and will become obedient citizens as soon as the great military centres are destroyed. Of these the chief are those of Virginia and Tennessee. The rebellion originated in the love of property, and is supported by the same principle. Break down those centres of power that lend the idea of protection to all property, and you have before you a people seeking a power to which they may attach themselves, and which is capable of sustaining them in their rights of property. When they discover such a power, they will obey it and sustain it.

The duty of the army is, then, to destroy all the large armed forces. The small ones will then die out of themselves. This labor must be performed. All the armed forces must be effectually broken down. As an incident to all, auxiliary forces must fall. If slaves sustain the armies, they must be removed from that function at all hazards. The policy of the army, then, is simply to remove the brute forces that impede the progress of the civil authority. I will in a subsequent letter explain at some length the offices of the civil authorities. C. H. W. B.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

The Eighth-avenue Abortion Case.

CLOSE OF THE EXAMINATION BEFORE JUDGE M'CUNN.

The preliminary examination before Judge McCUNN in the case of Dr. BROWN, charged with procuring an abortion upon Miss ANNESLEY, and thereby causing her death, was concluded on Saturday. Dr. BROWN was present, but appeared to take little interest in the proceeding. The examination was conducted by Mr. R. L. CLINTON, counsel for Dr. BROWN, and was confined to the medical men who attended the post-mortem examination and testified at the Coroner's inquest. The object appeared to be to show that the death of Miss ANNESLEY was not necessarily caused by an abortion, or indeed that there was any positive evidence that an abortion had been procured. The first witness was Dr. THOS. C. FINNELL, who made the second post-mortem examination, and who gave his evidence in a very quiet, clear, prompt and intelligent manner. The details are not proper for publication, but the substance of his testimony was that the post-mortem developed evidences of an abortion having been produced, in the altered condition of the womb, the intense congestion of the parts, and the abscesses that had formed as a result of the inflammation. The immediate cause of death, he said, was pyæmia, or poisoning of the blood, resulting from the abscesses which were superinduced by the inflammation. The fact that the deceased had been pregnant was also shown by the enlarged breasts, the areola, and the enlarged glands upon its surface. He described a large number of instruments which were shown to him at the Station-house, as belonging to Dr. BROWN, most of which he said were not such as are ordinarily used by physicians and surgeons in their regular and legitimate practice. The post-mortem was conducted in the presence of Drs. Ranney, Tucker, Connolly, Galen Hunter and Hubbard.

At the close of Dr. FINNELL's testimony, Drs. RANNEY and HUNTER were examined, and agreed in all the principal points with Dr. FINNELL. Mr. CLINTON then announced that he would not continue the examination further, and as the facts as already developed, would leave it to the discretion of the Judge whether to recommit the client, or admit him to bail, or discharge him altogether. Judge McCUNN said he would look over the testimony, and he proposed to give his decision at 4 P. M. At the time fixed, the Judge announced that from the serious nature of the charge against the Doctor, he had made up his mind not to discharge him, or admit him to bail, but to remand him to prison for trial. The evidence showed that SIMES had betrayed the confidence of the poor girl who was now lying in her cold and lonely grave, and that no voice was now raised to an imperturbable world, ever ready to condemn a weak woman, and no kind word was uttered in her behalf to redeem her name from the fearful shame which her acquaintance with SIMES had brought upon her. The only statement of that poor girl's condition came from him, we have from his own lips, and in that statement he has endeavored to sink her lower than hell—viz. It is one of the most terrible demonstrations of human depravity he had ever listened to. And he was convinced that SIMES was anxious to have the abortion produced, even at the risk of the life of the woman, he had ruined; and that he had found Dr. BROWN a ready and willing instrument to assist him in his base desires. He believed they were equally guilty in his mind, of the most heinous of crimes, and he could nothing in all the mass of evidence produced before him to justify him in entertaining other motives of Mr. CLINTON.

A Shrewd Burglary in Duane-street: FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS' WORTH OF SILK STOLEN—ARREST OF ONE OF THE BURGLARS, AND RECOVERY OF THE PROPERTY.

A very shrewd and daring burglary was committed yesterday morning, at the store of Messrs. AUTRECHE, HUSSENOT & Co., No. 140 Duane-street, near West Broadway. This firm are extensive importers and dealers in silks; and but for the activity of the Police, and an informer accident which the burglars met, $15,000 worth of the rich silk dress goods of this firm would have been spirited away beyond the reach of the rightful owners.

The circumstances of the case, so far as they have transpired, are as follows: About 3½ o'clock yesterday morning, Officers FLANAGAN and McGUIRE, of the Fourteenth Precinct, while patrolling their respective beats, discovered a large quantity of silk goods at the foot of the stairs leading to the front tenement of No. 162 Centre-street. Upon an examination of the property, they became satisfied that thieves had been around, and that, owing to some sudden emergency, they had been compelled to leave their booty at the place above indicated. They were confirmed in this belief by the fact that parts of a wagon-wheel were found in the street opposite, and marks, as if a broken-down vehicle having been drawn along, were traced by the officers for the distance of seven or eight blocks, to the place where the burglary was committed. While the officers were endeavoring, by means of the tracks, to ascertain from whence the goods were taken, they left another person in charge at No. 162 Centre-street, and during their temporary absence, a young man appeared and claimed the property as his. When the Policemen approached, however, the claimant ran swiftly away. He was pursued and captured on the corner of Broadway and Grand-street, by the two Police officers named above. Upon being taken to the Station-house he gave his name as GEORGE MORRIS. He is about 25 years of age, and is evidently a young man of considerable native shrewdness. When in conversation he cannot look a person in the face in a manly way, and there is about him certain indications of dissipation and debauchery. He is detained at the Fourteenth Precinct Station-house to await the arrest of his accomplices. The property found in Centre-street was also taken to the Station-house, where it is held by Capt. WILLIAMSON for identification. It consists of one black silk dress goods valued at $7,000. The whole, when found, was in five bags, constructed of bed-ticking, and in them were thrown some blankets. By means of marks upon the goods and the traces of the tracks of the thieves as it was drawn through the streets, the officers were enabled to ascertain the premises where the burglary was committed. Messrs. AUTRECHE, HUSSENOT & Co. occupy the upper portion of No. 140 Duane-street. An adjoining building is a tenement occupied by Mrs. Detective DUSENBERY and family. JULIA, who, yesterday, made a thorough examination of the entire premises, we learn, the following facts relative to the manner in which the burglars managed to effect their purpose: On Friday last, some persons rented a then vacant room in the rear part of the third floor of the tenement house, for the purpose, as they said, of accommodating a small family. When they moved in they took a large number of straw beds. Yesterday the officers found that a hole, about twenty inches square, had been cut through a double wall, twenty-six inches in thickness, from the rear room on the third floor of this tenement house, to the second floor of Messrs. AUTRECHE & HUSSENOT's premises. The orifice was about twelve feet above the store floor, and directly over the place where the boxes and bales of silk had been placed by the proprietors. In fact, the work showed that the workmen had not commenced their task without a knowledge of the situation and condition of things in the store, and the entire job is evidence that they were expert and practical operators. In the rear of the premises were found between seven and eight thousand dollars' worth of silks, all finely packed in sacks and ready to be taken away at the next load, and which, but for the unfortunate (for them) circumstance that their first load was too much for the rickety old grocer's wagon which the burglars had pressed into their service, they would doubtless have succeeded in getting beyond the reach of the officers of the law. In the room which they had occupied there were several hundred dollars' worth of silk handkerchiefs, in boxes, which they had taken from the same store. There was also a large quantity of straw in the room, which had been taken from the bed ticks, in order that they might use the latter in which to pack and carry away the silks. It is the opinion of the officers that these skillful burglars worked at their task on Friday night last, and that they had their plans all laid to effect an entrance to the store during the early part of Saturday night, so that before daylight yesterday morning, the whole robbery would have been completed; but owing to the breaking down of their wagon the enterprise has to them been a failure. A further investigation will take place to-day, and it is believed that the accomplices of MORRIS will be secured. Officers FLANAGAN and McGUIRE, of the Fourteenth, and also Detective DUSENBERY, are deserving of much credit for their activity and energy in securing the property and effecting the arrest of one of the offenders.

McGOWAN ON JAPAN.—Dr. McGOWAN, the recognized authority in Chinese and Japanese affairs, is about to deliver a course of lectures on Japan and its Customs. The Doctor's long official residence in Japan, and his thorough knowledge of everything pertaining to its private habits and public customs, afford him the very best material for a lecture both instructive and entertaining. The first lecture will be given to-night at Stuyvesant Institute, No. 659 Broadway.

IS HACKLEY DEAD OR ASLEEP?—Our streets reek with filth. Pedestrianism is almost an impossibility. Thousands of dollars are expended annually for the cleaning of our streets, and yet the men who get the money sit and smoke, while those who pay it slip continually, fall more frequently, and occasionally break their legs. Mr. HACKLEY should clean the streets or resign.

APPLETON'S PHOTOGRAPHS.—If our readers have the mania which just at this time seems universal, the fever of photograph on the brain, we advise them to go to APPLETON'S. If to obtain oneself in duplicate is the desire, that's the place to have it done; if to secure pictures of all the world and his wife, that's the place to find the desideratum.

MR. MASON JONES TO-MORROW EVENING.—We would remind our readers that no tickets will be sold at the doors to-morrow evening. The advertisement states where they are purchasable, and we are informed that the demand for them is so great that to-day is likely to be the last day of their sale.

THE PICTURE SALE TO-NIGHT.—Our readers are reminded that the collection of GEO. L. BROWN is to be offered to-night and to-morrow night, at SNEDICOR's, Broadway near Eighth-street. Among these paintings are some of the finest sketches and finished views of this celebrated artist.

ATTEMPT TO BURN DOWN THE OLD LUNATIC ASYLUM.—An attempt was made on Friday night last to burn down the old Lunatic Asylum in the town of Flatbush. The building is now occupied by the Fifty-second Regiment, New-York State Militia, as a barracks, and it appears that it was set on fire by some of the soldiers, so as to enable all who desired to escape in the confusion. The discovery was made in time by the officers to enable them to suppress the rising flames. Two recruits, named WARREN HAWKINS and THOMAS BURGESS, were arrested by Officers BRADLEY and CONNOLLY, of the Ninth Ward Police, upon the complaint of Lieut.-Col. WM. C. BOWNE, who charges them with having set the place on fire.

MESSAGE FROM HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

The following message was received from His Honor the Mayor, and the resolution relative to the salary of the Register of Water Rents, Clerk of the Aqueduct Board, &c.:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,

NEW-YORK, Dec. 15, 1862.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN:

I return, without my approval, the resolution which originated in your honorable body, increasing the salary of the Register of Water Rents to the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars per annum, and those of the Deputy Register, the Clerk of the Aqueduct Board, and Chief Clerk of the Register to twelve hundred dollars each per annum, and the salary of the President of the Croton Aqueduct Board to the sum of five hundred dollars per annum. While it is admitted that the rise in the prices of many of the necessaries of life has been so considerable as to make a reasonable plea for an augmentation in the salaries at present paid to City officials, there is reason to believe that this rise will be but temporary, and it must be borne in mind that were such an increase warranted, in the cases embraced in your resolution, it would be manifest injustice to all the other officers of the City, whose salaries, others having approximately under the City Government, were they to avail themselves of the prevailing rule, resolution would establish. I wish to meet the subject in this broad issue, and yet confine my views to the present resolution alone.

The grounds of my objection to the whole subject of the increase of salaries at this moment are, that we are, as a Nation, engaged in a war which involves a struggle for the integrity of the Union—the most momentous and gigantic struggle in which it has ever been, our destiny to be engaged; and that the emergency expected to arise by incident to such a war are very large in this, our metropolitan City. It has called forth the patriotic devotion of our citizens, and it has called forth the orderly and cheerful obedience of all classes of the community to the demands for heavy taxes, the war expenditures have rendered it absolutely necessary should be levied on their personal and on their property. And while the general sentiment of the community is that the mode of taxation are to be approached, I deem it most unwise that any line of policy should be adopted which would impose additional burdens.

I subscribe to the following opinion, that if every appeal to every citizen of our under the municipal government of New-York will feel a pride in aiding in the retrenchment of his private expenditure, thereby rendering that he is imbued with the spirit of true patriotism, and willing to make any reasonable sacrifice to sustain the necessary war until the suppression of the rebellion shall restore to our now distracted country the blessings of peace and continuous prosperity.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Our dispatches from the Army of the Potomac this morning inform us that the great battle of the war commenced on Saturday, and was continued throughout the day with great pertinacity and much slaughter. The morning opened with a dense fog, in the midst of which Gen. Reynolds' corps, on the left, advanced, and at 9½ o'clock engaged the enemy's infantry. Seven minutes afterward the rebels opened a heavy fire of artillery, which was responded to by our batteries though the firing was necessarily much at random, owing to the fog. This, however, soon afterward changed away, and an unobstructed view of the rebel position could be had. It was determined that the first ridge of hills occupied by the enemy's works must be carried by assault, and this duty was assigned to Gen. French's Division, supported by Gen. Howard's. At ten minutes before noon our troops advanced to the works, but when within musket range, were met with such a terrible fire of musketry that they were forced to fall back. Reinforced, they again essayed the task, but were again driven back by the terrible fire of artillery and musketry now concentrated upon them. The firing was then continued at longer range until after dark, no other attempt being made to storm. On the left, where the attack was commanded by Gen. Franklin, our troops were more successful. After a hard day's fight the Rebels were driven back about a mile, with heavy losses. At one time the enemy advanced to attack, but were handsomely repulsed, with the loss of between four and five hundred prisoners. Our troops slept at night where they fought during the day. Our losses were severe, including Gens. Jackson and Bayard of Pennsylvania, Maj. Gen. Gore. Vinton, Gibbons, Kimball and Cutlewna, wounded, besides numerous line-officers killed and wounded. Yesterday there was no fog. At daylight there was a heavy fire of artillery and infantry in front of the first line of works, and also in front of Gen. Franklin's Division, down the river, but it slackened in about an hour, and continued only at intervals that night; and the indications were that no decisive battle would be fought on that day, unless the whole should bring on the engagement. During the night and forenoon they considerably extended their works, and strengthened their position. Our wounded were all removed from the field and cared for, but the dead who fell near the enemy's works, still remain upon the field, the rebels firing upon all who attempted their removal during the night.

A party of Rebel Cavalry, said to number 1,000 or 1,500, and supposed to belong to Stuart's command, made a dash into Dumfries, on Friday morning, captured ten sutlers, a number of pickets, and a telegraph repairer; cut down a telegraph pole and cut the wire, destroyed several Government and sutlers' wagons, and then hastily decamped. The place was subsequently occupied by Gen. Stoneman, and the telegraph was repaired. This interruption accounts for the delay in the reception of our dispatches on Friday.

The United States steam transport George C. Collins arrived at this port on Saturday night, from Newbern, on the 10th inst. She brings intelligence that the troops at Newbern, amounting to at least 20,000, were making preparations for a movement when she left, but their destination was unknown. There it was conjectured that Goldsboro', or some other vital point in the railroad system of the State, would be visited. Gen. Foster was to command the expedition.

The Richmond Dispatch, of the 12th inst., announces that on the Saturday previous twelve regiments of National troops left Newbern, the belief being that they designed an attack on Weldon and Petersburgh, though some thought that Wilmington was the point aimed at. The next day two transports and five gunboats ascended the Chowan River, and a land force of ten thousand men was seen in motion from Suffolk, indicating a movement on Weldon. The Raleigh Progress announces the landing of a large force in Gates County, N. C.

We learn from Nashville that a cavalry expedition, under command of Gen. Stanley, on Thursday last proceeded as far as Franklin on a reconnoissance, fighting and routing a considerable rebel cavalry force on the way. At Franklin a charge was made through the town, and the rebel force occupying it was driven entirely out. Flouring mills and other property were then destroyed, and the expedition returned. It was ascertained that there is no large rebel force so far West, but that there are considerable bodies at Hollinsville and Murfreesboro; also at Steward's Creek.

According to the reports in the Memphis papers the expedition under Gen. Hovey was not so large as was reported, nor did it accomplish all that was stated. The infantry numbered but six thousand, and the cavalry, under Col. Waternburg, two thousand. The force left Helena on Thursday week, passed upon transports down the river to Delta—not Friar's Point, as before stated—where it disembarked and started upon its perilous march across the country in the direction of Grenada. The Memphis Bulletin, of Friday, the 5th instant, thus describes what followed: "It started from Delta the next morning and marched twenty miles the first day. On the second day, about noon, it struck the Coldwater stream, which it followed to its mouth, reaching it that night, where the infantry under Gen. Hovey remained. On the next day, Saturday, Gen. Waternburg, with the cavalry, pushed forward, and on Sunday struck the Mississippi Central Road, five or six miles above Grenada, toward Holly Springs, where they tore up the track and burned two bridges. While there, Gen. Waternburg learned that the rebels were in force at Grenada, and fortified. He therefore determined not to go to Grenada, but instead fell back to Hardee's Station on the Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad. There the General destroyed the railroad so that it will take a month to repair it. Gen. Waternburg then fell back twelve miles to the mouth of Coldwater, On Tuesday he went to Panola, and burned several hundred yards of bridge and trestle-work, after which he fell back to the infantry under Gen. Hovey, at the mouth of Coldwater, from which point dispatches of the above movements were sent to Helena, reaching there about 2 o'clock on Thursday morning." It is true that Grenada was evacuated on Saturday, but owing to misinformation, Gen. Waternburg did not go there, though he was within six miles, and there was nothing to prevent his occupying the place.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin states, on what it considers "reliable and indisputable authority," that "an extraordinary effort is to be made by emissaries from the rebel Government, as well as by rebel sympathizers in England, to furnish and fit out iron-clad and swift sailing steamers, not only for the purpose of breaking the blockade, but to successfully cope, if they be allowed the opportunity, with some of our own navy, or make a raid upon some unprotected harbor."

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival yesterday of the steamship Champion, we have advices from the Isthmus of Panama to the 5th inst. The treasure list of the steamer foots up nearly $700,000. There is no later news from Central or South America. Quiet prevails in Panama. A large fleet of war vessels was in the harbor—four French, four United States and one British. The loss or dismantling of the Sainbridge, during the recent gale at Aspinwall, leaves our Government without any naval representative on this side of the Isthmus. The flood along the railroad track had subsided, and travel had been resumed.

The Board of Aldermen met at 2½ o'clock Saturday afternoon. Mr. Walsh presented a resolution to give the Sixty-ninth Regiment, N. Y. S. N. G., the sum of $10,000, this corps being the only one entitled to this favor, in pursuance of the resolution adopted by the Common Council last September, guaranteeing $10,000 to each militia regiment that should be reorganized for the war and enter the United States service with eight full companies. The Sixty-ninth have had ten companies mustered in. The resolution, which was laid over under the rule, proposes to appropriate the money from the "Bounty Fund," which was raised on the authority of an ordinance, "for the speedy recruitment of troops" for the National army. A veto message of the Mayor, on the resolution increasing the salaries of the President and other officers of the Croton Department, was read and laid over. The ordinance from the other Board, designed to have the pavement torn up by the new railroad companies replaced by the Croton Department, and appropriating $25,000 for the purpose, was made the special order for the next meeting. Concurrence was had on the resolution directing the Street Commissioner to include in his estimates of appropriations for his Department next year the sum of $5,000 for working One Hundred and Fifty-fifth-street, from Broadway to Harlem River, as a country road. The Board adjourned till 5 o'clock P. M. of Monday.

The City Canvassers met at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and adjourned over till 2 P. M., of Monday, to make the formal declaration of results.

The Councilmanic Railroad Committee met Saturday, and considered the resolution inquiring by what right the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company have put down turnouts without the authority of the Common Council, and if they run any cars for which they have not procured licenses. The Company admit that they have put down a turnout in Fifty-ninth-street without authority, and will take it up if the Common Council desire them to do so. The Committee ascertained that the Company have been running from twenty to thirty unlicensed cars. The subject is to be further considered at 12 o'clock on Monday, to which time the Committee adjourned.

A daring burglary was committed on Sunday morning, at the store of Messrs. Auffmordt, Hasenauer & Co., No. 146 Duane-street. The burglars entered the premises by boring through a double wall, 20 inches in thickness, from a room in a tenement-house adjoining. The stolen property, consisting of silks to the amount of about $15,000, was recovered by the Police. One of the alleged offenders, named George Monroe, is in custody.

In South Newmarket, N. H., over two hundred and fifty bushels of apples have been pared, cut, strung and dried, and a good portion sent off to our soldiers in hospital, under the auspices of the Soldiers' Aid Society. All classes and professions in the place, from the gray-haired of eighty to children just old enough to use the needle and hold the string, came together at appointed times for the good work.

The Court-martial in session in St. Louis, investigating the charges against Maj. McKinstry, has refused his application to have Gen. McClellan summoned thither as a witness.

The New-Jersey regiments, including the Twenty-seventh, which left Alexandria a few days since and marched to Port Tobacco, Md., crossed the Potomac at Aquia Creek, and are now with Gen. Burnside's army at Fredericksburgh. The First and Second New-Jersey Brigades and the Eleventh Regiment are also there.

An Havana correspondent announces that the Confederate privateer Florida, otherwise the Oreto, which ran the blockade at Mobile some weeks since, is reported to have reappeared in the Gulf.

The Stock Market, on Saturday, after a dull business, closed with a steady feeling on the Share List. Gold coin fluctuated with the various rumors from the Army at Fredericksburgh. The price closed at 41 21/4.

Breadstuffs were in limited request on Saturday. Flour and Wheat declined slightly. Cotton was dull and heavy. Provisions were less active. A moderate business was reported in Groceries, Hops, Whisky, Wool and Tallow, at former rates. A good demand prevailed for Hay, at buoyant prices. The Freight market was inactive, with 474 vessels, of all classes, in port.

The Redemption of Postage Stamps.—We publish this morning a notice from the Postmaster of this City, that the redemption of postage stamps which have been used for currency, and no others, will be commenced to-day, and be continued thirty days, and no longer. Mr. Wakeman states very clearly and distinctly the rules which must be rigidly observed in presenting these stamps for redemption. They seem to be, in the main, reasonable and just. We do not quite see how the Department is to determine what stamps have been used for currency, and what have not;—but its decision in the matter is to be final,—and it will also reject peremptorily all which, in its judgment, have been used for the prepayment of postage.

We are requested to draw special attention to the notification that this redemption will continue for only thirty days;—and to add that the time will not be extended under any circumstances. All who fail to present them during that period will do so with the certainty of losing them.

The Battle of Saturday.

The action of Saturday is evidently to be classed with the great battles of the war. The whole of the Richmond Rebel Army seems to have been in the field, though, we are sorry to say, it does not appear that it was opposed by the whole of the "Army of the Potomac." We hardly know of an outlying division of the rebel force in Virginia. All had been gathered in from the Shenandoah Valley and from the country East of the Blue Ridge—they had been brought from Gordonsville, from Richmond and the peninsula leading up to it, from the regions on the South bank of the James, from the North Carolina coast, and from all the points for a hundred miles around Richmond occupied against the menaces of Union columns. There were very good facilities for this; for though there is but a single line of railroad running into Fredericksburgh, yet at the junction forty miles below that place the whole railroad systems of the South and West converge. We do not credit the assertion of the telegraph that they had two hundred thousand men on the field; but even a half of that force, posted in such formidable positions as they held, was an army that certainly should not have been met with less than its own strength. Of the rebel Generals, Lee, Jackson, Longstreet and the Hills, appear all to have been on hand.

As to our army, we must suppose that the major part of the three divisions of Gen. Burnside had crossed the Rappahannock before Saturday morning. Our troops had commenced to cross on the afternoon of Thursday, and continued to pour over during that evening and night and during the whole of Friday, when all continued quiet; and on the evening of that day a dispatch from headquarters was sent to the Press which announced that the "main body of the Union army was over the river, the balance being in position to cross at any time." As the battle of Saturday was commenced in the morning by our troops, both on the line of Sumner and Franklin, by their advance upon the enemy's works, it must be supposed everything was gotten ready for the assault, with a full knowledge of the rebel numbers and position. Yet a semi-official Washington dispatch this morning states that it is believed (in official circles, we suppose) that not over forty thousand of our troops were engaged. This is probably as far from the truth as the estimate from the same quarter of the enemy's numbers; but still it does not appear that the assault was made with anything like the force we had been assured was within Burnside's grasp. From a careful reading of the dispatches, and from the list of officers killed and wounded, it would appear as if only our centre and left Grand Divisions (those of Sumner and Franklin) were engaged. Gen. Hooker, on the right wing, does not seem to have participated in the fight. Gen. Siegel, who, we were told, with his Reserve Grand Division, had arrived on the Rappahannock some days ago, was evidently not on hand. And several other heavy detailed columns from the North and from before Washington, which marched in the early part of the week, to take a hand in the struggle, which, it was believed, would be both great and decisive, were not at Fredericksburgh on Saturday. Beside these forces, we had been definitely assured that a vast mass of troops had been gathered at points to the southward of the rebel Capital, which were to make a cooperating assault somewhere on the enemy's rear, simultaneously with Burnside's assault on their front. This programme, which was sufficiently large, comprehensive, and promising, if it had an existence anywhere outside of the brains of strategic newspapers, was not carried out; and the fact that though our side had the choice of the moment of assault, there was such an insignificant part of it attempted or executed, and that a mere moiety of our army were in the action, looks as if it were no part of the plans of Gen. Halleck.

It is highly probable, however, we think, that Gen. Burnside began the operation of Saturday for a reason which, as yet, does not appear, and that it was only preliminary to the combined and general assault upon the rebel army, which will presently be executed. With the Grand Division of Gen. Hooker—with the Grand Division of Gen. Siegel—with the Harper's Ferry column, and the column from Washington, joined to the two divisions which fought so valorously on Saturday—one of them twice assaulting the enemy's works, and at least holding the ground on which it fought, and the other driving the rebel right wing a mile and a half before it—with his army of Saturday thus more than doubled (which it probably is by this morning,) Burnside will make an attempt to complete the work in hand, and which cannot wisely be delayed. And if, as we still earnestly hope, in addition to these various forces, there be really a heavy army gathering on the south of Richmond, near Petersburgh, and if their cooperation be properly timed with Burnside's advance, we shall, before the end of the year, see the campaign which was so auspiciously inaugurated by crossing the Rappahanneck on Thursday last, brought to a no less auspicious close.

The Evil of Desertion.

General Halleck has announced, either twelve or fourteen times, that desertion from the Union Army is not permissible. If he continues to reiterate this statement long enough, there is hardly a doubt, that some of the twenty thousand men and officers who are now said to be absent without leave, will finally get indoctrinated with the notion that quitting the army without the knowledge of their superiors is an objectionable practice. But that his weekly denunciation of it through the newspapers will put a stop to it, there is not the least probability. He has as yet given no indication of any intention of punishing it in any way beyond striking the names of offenders amongst the officers from the army list. Upon the officers this will doubtless produce some effect. Some of the absentees will be stimulated by it into joining their regiments, and some who intended to become absentees whenever the opportunity offered, will be deterred by it into resigning themselves to the performance of their duty. But that the country will gain by the infliction of this penalty we greatly doubt. Any officer who needs to be threatened in this manner in order to keep him at his post, is, in nine cases out of ten, unfit for it, and would benefit the service by quitting it. If he has so little zeal and so little pride, and so little love of the work and of the cause, that nothing but the fear of losing his commission prevents him from abandoning his regiment, the regiment is sure to be better without him; and any order which simply calls him back, after a month or two or three of disgraceful shirking, and puts him in his old place with credit unimpaired, reputation untarnished and pay untouched, is an injury both to the army and the country.

For the desertion of the privates, however, which is much the more serious evil of the two, because their places are harder to fill, the War Department seems to have absolutely no remedy. Gen. Halleck's weekly reprimand produces no effect upon the delinquents whatever, and produces upon the army at large the worst effect possible, because it holds out the plain prospect of impunity for the greatest of military crimes. We commented a few days ago upon the prevalence of marauding amongst our troops. Desertion is another form of the same disease. Want of discipline, is a worse one indeed, because it weakens our resources. We are engaged in a struggle of unparalleled proportions; voluntary enlistment may be said to be exhausted; drafting has to a great extent been found impracticable; and we have at home a large body of indefatigable agitators doing everything that perverted ingenuity can suggest to demoralize and dishearten the country. Under these circumstances we cannot spare a single man from his post; and yet we are informed that twenty thousand, at least, have deserted, and the number is every day increasing. Twenty thousand men would in any other war be considered an army in itself; a less number has on many a famous field decided the fate of nations, and before this campaign is over, the presence or absence of that number in some encounter or other may save or lose the Union.

Considering all this—considering, too, how desertion is regarded in all other armies, and how it has to be regarded in order to keep an army together, there is something more than provoking in the benignity with which our Government seems to regard it. One of the sternest and most repulsive features of war, of the hollest and noblest, as well as of the foulest and basest, but one which they who draw the sword must look at without flinching, is, that there surely comes a time when the enthusiasm and patriotism of all armies in the field, flag or die out; when the mass of the rank and file tire of marching and bivouacking—tire of cold and hunger and wet—when the recklessness begot by hourly danger, gets into the heart, and makes it to reck little of either honor or duty. When this crisis comes, it has to be met by discipline, rigid, unswerving discipline; and even before it comes, it has to be staved off by discipline. Nothing else will suffice to bring any army through a long war. Nothing else has been found sufficient to steel men against the wear and tear of mind and body which life in the field always brings with it.

Now, there can be no discipline without punishment; and there is no military crime in the whole category which deserves punishment so much as desertion, because it not only strikes at the very existence of the army itself, but it is the device by which the worst men of the force are enabled to impose their share of their labor and danger upon the shoulders of the best. And yet in our army there is absolutely no punishment for it. The worst that can happen to a man who deserts is to be sent back to his regiment. Hundreds of vagabonds who quit their camp without leave are picked up in Washington every week by the Provost-Marshal's Guard, and marched back to their posts with as much consideration and good nature as if they had been on duty. So that our force in the field may really be said to be kept together either by the conscientiousness of the men, or the material difficulties in the way of running away. As short, it is organized on thoroughly secessionist principles. If our Government be, as our Democrats would have us believe, a Government which all bodies of persons numbering over one hundred may repudiate at pleasure, the proper kind of army for such a Power, is an army which every private can abandon when he sees fit. But we believe that it is now very well settled that our Government does not answer to this description, and it is high time that our army ceased to do so.

We believe most of the Generals in command have long been alive to the necessity of making as many examples as may be found necessary to put a stop to wholesale desertion, by shooting two or three offenders in flagrant cases; but the President stands in the way, and is invariably so cruelly kind as to recoil from extreme measures. This ought not to be. Nobody is more jealous of interference with him in his legitimate sphere than we are. But he cannot safely interfere, either in matters of strategy or in matters of discipline. The nation intrusts him with the power to choose the best officers within his reach to do the work of this war; but, having chosen them, it expects him to let them do their work in their own way, and maintain discipline by such means as our own experience, as well as that of all other nations, has proved to be necessary and efficacious.

The Clergy Memorializing the President.

We bespeak caution from the clergy who are proposing to memorialize the President in reference to the Proclamation of Emancipation. The cause they have so closely at heart, in our judgment, demands just now, particularly, that they "should be wise as serpents and harmless as doves."

Of course, they cannot suppose that we share, in the least, the spirit of those sheets which are clamoring against the movement as impertinent, and a dishonor to the sacred office. Remembering with what vigor the journal, which leads off in the present outcry, commended the bold stand of many clergymen in favor of the compromise of 1850, we can hardly overcome a certain feeling of disgust at the present inconsistency. Clergymen, like men of all other callings, are yet citizens, and have a right to form and cherish their own political convictions. And it is impossible that they should not have an influence. They are men whose lives are connected with the service of truth, and the highest interests of humanity; men, as a body, of large education and strong mental power, of refined sensibilities, of deep piety, of uncalled virtue, of singleness of purpose invigorated by habitual self-denial, and by a patriotism beyond all reach of preferment or reward; men familiar with the depths of the human heart, as well as with the grounds of moral science; men who, as a body, are not surpassed by any other body of men on earth, in any quality that ennobles or adorns human nature; men who are Americans all, the descendants of those who encountered the dangers of the ocean and the violence of savages to establish free conscience and free judgment upon this continent—the successors of those godly men who prayed for their country on the battle-fields of the Revolution—and who themselves, in the present direful struggle, have done more than any other class to strengthen, exalt and sustain the public courage. In all great public emergencies, none have a better right to speak and to be heard. Averse, as they justly are, to mingling in the ordinary political broils of the day, yet when great moral principles are at stake, when the vital interests of the Republic are involved and men are called upon to act under weighty responsibilities, it is meet that Christian ministers who are isolated from the political arena, who have capacity to form wise judgments and character to obtain a deferential hearing, should, on all proper occasions, express their sentiments, whether the vapering politicians and petty wire-pullers will hear or forbear. If they have not the experience of professional politicians in mixed affairs, if they do not thoroughly understand the complicated material interests of the nation, external and internal, they are, at all events, quite as familiar as any other class with the great moral principles which constitute the only true elements of national prosperity; and their very retirement from the field of party controversy secures soberness of judgment and honesty of purpose. None but bad rulers and bad men have reason to be jealous of their public influence.

In this case, however, there is a fair question of propriety and expediency—one which applies not only to clergymen, but, in fact, to all civilians. What is the Emancipation Proclamation? Is it a philanthropic device? A scheme of civil reform? A measure to advance party? Not at all. The Proclamation is either a military expedient, purely and simply, or it is nothing whatever. President Lincoln has issued it, in his capacity as Commander-in-Chief, solely as an instrumentality for putting down the rebellion. For any other purpose, he had no more authority or right in the premises, than had President Harrison or President Fillmore. If it can be shown that he did not so mean it, and so employ it—that he took advantage of circumstances to promulge for other than military ends what professes to be a military edict—if it can be shown that he has usurped power, has made himself liable to impeachment, and that the Proclamation itself is without the slightest validity. With what propriety, then, can the President be plied with either philanthropic, or civil or political inducements to adhere to the step he has taken? Are not such efforts directly calculated to bring distrust upon his singleness of purpose, to impair his influence, to embarrass his action? Such considerations may be ever so just and weighty in themselves, but they are not such as he can legitimately entertain. He must look to military advantages alone for his sanction. We don't understand that our clerical friends intend to submit any new exposition of these; and therefore we fear that what they do will weaken rather than strengthen the President's position.

There is another important view. Though the successful working of the Proclamation as a military measure may be quite independent of all Southern feeling, whether favorable or unfavorable, yet its sequel cannot so be. If the slaves are actually freed by it, the good will and coöperation of the now non-slaveholding part of the Southern people will be a matter of primary concern, especially if the negroes remain in the country. Upon this will greatly depend the safe and tranquil solution of the mighty difficulties and dangers which, it has always been believed, must inevitably follow sudden emancipation. There are grounds for believing that this good will and coöperation can be secured. Thus far, the reaction against the rebellion, so far as it has manifested itself, is attended with a similar reaction against Slavery. In Missouri it has already nearly sent Slavery by the board. In Maryland, Eastern North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, the institution has been daily becoming more and more obnoxious. Indications to the same effect are seen even in New-Orleans. It is nearly impossible for any who have once come really to abhor the rebellion, to be complacent toward Slavery—least of all possible for those who have suffered from it, as have the non-slaveholding masses of the South. The original treason was concocted by the most notorious champions of Slavery, and was distinctly avowed to be made in its interests. As the people open their eyes to the hideousness of this treason, and the innumerable woes it has brought upon them to no purpose, they cannot, even if they would, escape a change of feeling toward the parent of it all. It is the true policy of the North to let this change work itself out with as little interference on our part as possible. Nothing could lend more to revive the old prejudices and jealousies than to inaugurate, or seem to inaugurate, a new humanitarian crusade at this period; or to establish the idea that the Proclamation was not the military expedient it purported to be, but a fetch, a sham, a pretext, intended for different ends.

There is no danger that the Proclamation will be revoked, or materially modified. The lapse of time in no wise abates its military necessity. Justification is apparently just as far distant to-day as on the 22d of September, when it was issued. It can stand on its own original basis. Let it so stand. Give it free play for whatever potency there may be in it. It needs no bolstering, or shifting; and all such attempts by outsiders go only to damage it. If it effects what it proposes, then indeed will there be fit opportunity for the wisdom and zeal of all civilians, clerical and lay. But the military work here, as everywhere else, must precede,—leaving humanity to follow and take care of the consequences.

Government Arrests.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

More than five weeks ago Mr. Colonel Talley, a loyal man and a reputable banker of this City, was arrested on an order from Mr. Secretary Seward, and imprisoned in prison without even being allowed to communicate with his family. His wife remained for days, not knowing what had become of him.

On Monday last a daily paper announced that he and Mr. Hoxsmann, who was arrested with him, had been released from their confinement. The announcement, so far as Mr. Talley is concerned, is not true. He is still in custody; no reason is allowed to the prisoner, and nothing, not even a change of under garments, has been permitted to reach him. His crime is supposed to be the having brought claims against the Government; to the amount of some twelve thousand dollars; and this other hardship, as we are informed, first made inquiry in every case from the proper officers, and been told by them in each instance that the claims were genuine.

This certainly is not a case to justify a star-chamber procedure. If we are living under a government of law, the law must be competent to protect its subjects. All good men and now straining every nerve to support the Government and to save the country from ruin, and the Government has no right thus to strike with the sympathies of its supporters. Nothing can justify it in such arbitrary and tyrannic arrests.

Yours, X.

We are satisfied that the Government is pursuing a course in this matter of arrests which is not called for by any emergency, and which is in the highest degree injurious to its character, and to the welfare of the country. The power which it asserts, and which we do not propose to question, of making arrests summarily, without any of the ordinary formalities of such proceedings, and without responsibility to the judicial tribunals of the country, is the highest function of any Government. No despot in the world can go beyond this in the exercise of arbitrary power.

It can scarcely be necessary to say that, if such a power is to be exercised at all, it should be with every safeguard against abuse, and with every precaution against needless personal suffering, which the utmost care of the Government can provide. Yet, if we may form an opinion on the subject from facts of daily notoriety, as well as from information which comes to us from private sources, the entire control of this class of public duties has been handed over to men utterly reckless of personal rights, and utterly indifferent to the honor and character of the Government they serve. President Lincoln, in justice to himself as well as the country, should give this matter enough of his personal attention to obviate the glaring abuses which, in the present mode of exercising this power, shock the public sense of justice and propriety.

The Fire in the Rear.—A short time since a very considerable military force, not less than six regiments, it is supposed, steamed out of Hampton Roads and directed their course to a Southern port not very far distant. We have direct and authentic information from Newbern, N. C., very recent in date, to the effect that the entire force there, (and it is larger by some thousands than it was,) is about to move under Gen. Foster, "upon the enemy's works," wherever those works may be. The same information, slightly magnified, is conveyed in the extracts from Southern newspapers, which we receive by telegraph from Fortress Monroe, this morning.

We take it that Richmond is to be regarded as the centre of the enemy's army in the great district east of the mountains; and that to concentration upon this centre all our own movements in the East are now directed. In other words, a battle-field of much grander proportions than the pent-up countries of Europe have ever afforded, is spread out before the combatants in the United States, of which Fredericksburgh is only a point on the northern edge. At this moment the battle is raging at Fredericksburgh; but the fortunes of the war are not all staked there. Before the decisive struggle occurs even between the heavy columns of the two armies at Fredericksburgh, the probability is that the Southern horizon will be lit up by the blaze of battle, and that the enemy holding at bay as he may fancy the chief army of the Union at the Rappahannock, may be dis-

[illegible] to find Richmond assaulted and carried by a Union army in its rear!

That our Government has the men to work upon this great theatre of war in the way thus indicated, we are assured. That such is the plan now developing we hope and believe. It would be a surprise as brilliant as electrifying, if, while all loyal hearts are turned to Fredericksburgh with intense solicitude, and with the weight of nations upon them, the great of victory should come up from a distant part of the field, and the rebellion fall crushed just when it imagined itself secure.

GENERALS AND PRIVATES.—A recent letter of Gen. McCLELLAN, responsive to a vote of thanks from the Philadelphia Common Council, contained this sentence: "The events of this war have shown that the fighting qualities of our private soldiers may be relied upon by the Government, and that if military failures occur, their causes must be looked for in defects of organization, command, or plans."

In this statement, the late commander of the Army of the Potomac only confirms what the public have learnt from the current history of every engagement since the war began. There has been a superabundance of bravery, but an appalling absence of Generalship. Our men have never flinched at any danger. Nay, the greater the peril, the more burning has been their desire to confront it—of which fact we have had no more splendid illustration than in the case of the brave fellows on Thursday last who jumped into the small boats, and crossed the Rappahannock in face of the rebel musketeers.

[illegible] "plans." Who is responsible for these defects? In whose hands has been the organization of our army—who has had the appointment of its Commanders—who has had the planning of campaigns? It is the Government at Washington, and not the people of the country nor the private soldiers of the army, who must be held responsible for our failures.

GERMAN HOME.—Congress, at its former session, passed a law for the establishment of Agricultural Colleges in each State, and in connection with each College an Experimental Farm, which, in addition to the practical solution of ordinary problems of culture, should be devoted to the acclimating of foreign plants and animals. A number of leading philanthropists have organized a general movement, by memorials to State Legislatures, in favor of the establishment of an Orphan Home on each Experimental Farm, in which the orphans of deceased soldiers, who would otherwise be a charge upon the country, may be brought up to labor and taught a practical knowledge of agriculture.

It requires action on the part of each State Legislature to accept the grant of public lands from the National Government, and to organize the Colleges and Farms as proposed. It is through the State Legislatures, therefore, that the Orphan's Home feature is to be introduced. The public, who have had so much more stirring and exciting matter to think of, are not aware, perhaps, that the whole country has been canvassed in behalf of this very benevolent scheme, and that scarcely a doubt remains of its adoption by most, if not all, of the States. Dr. HOLDEN, who was commissioned by the chief movers in the matter to visit the various States, and present the subject, has returned to our City, and made a report, which will be found in our columns. The intrinsic merit and the national importance of the movement will insure attention to it.

The Secession Opinion Opposition.

[illegible] Letter of the [illegible] Times:

[illegible] Permit me a few remarks by way of [illegible] upon my letter of the 5th inst. In that letter I fully admitted the personal [illegible] and kindly feeling evinced by the [illegible] at the Chamber of Commerce; but, [illegible] the state of public feeling between the two [illegible], I was anxious to enter my protest against [illegible] being given in the spirit of a hearing [illegible]

[illegible] Scripture on this point, are about as pertinent as men in his mood usually make.

"Mercator" has the stereotyped fling at "Republican" merchants of Massachusetts and New-York for engaging in the Slave-trade, and compares their action with that of the English merchants who fitted out the pirate Alabama. The analogy is a good one. We accept it, and beg to assure him that if he will point out the Slave-traders in question, they will be duly punished. He may remember that one of this class was hung in this City not long ago. The English Government shows no disposition to deal with the aiders and abettors of piracy in a similar way. When it does, we will accept "Mercator's" apology as entitled to weight. Meantime we will add that, in our judgment, his sneer upon "certain gentle Republicans" is utterly gratuitous and without foundation. We do not believe he ever heard of any Republican, in Massachusetts or New-York, who was even suspected of being engaged in the Slave-trade.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. GRAU'S season of Italian opera came to an end on Saturday, when there was a capital attendance at the Academy, to enjoy an excellent morning performance of "Un Ballo in Maschera." We need scarcely remind our readers that the impresario has more than fulfilled his promises to the public. The season originally announced was of ten nights only. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather which has, of course, materially interfered with the prosperity of the enterprise, Mr. GRAU has given nineteen opera nights and three matinées, playing during that time no fewer than ten operas, namely: "La Traviata," "Il Trovatore," "Norma," "Dinorah," "La Figlia del Reggimento," "Lucrezia Borgia," "La Favorita," "Un Ballo in Maschera," "Ernani," and (to-night) "I Puritani." When it is remembered that the management was in a way thrust upon Mr. GRAU, and that he had at a moment's notice to form a company from material that had been wrecked on our shore by Mr. ULLMAN, it will, we think, be conceded that this is doing pretty well. This season, in point of female artists, has been unusually interesting, no fewer than four prime donne—GERRARDELLI, LORINI, CORREA and MORENSI—having appeared. Mr. GRAU'S efforts are always well patronized by the public. On the present occasion they seem to have been appreciated by the artists. It will be seen by the following letter that riches are in store for Mr. GRAU:

NEW-YORK, Dec. 10, 1862.

MY DEAR FRIEND GRAU: On behalf of myself and the artists engaged under your management at the Academy of Music, we consider it due alike to you and ourselves to tender you most cordially the well-merited compliment of a benefit on the close of the present New-York season, and prior to the departure of the company for Philadelphia.

We consider that to your energy and perseverance during the last two years, and your promptness under circumstances the most adverse to an operatic season, when no other manager could be found bold enough to hazard the experiment, many persons are indebted for engagements which otherwise they would, in all probability, be without. We also offer you this compliment (which is not intended, my dear GRAU, as an idle one,) in candid recognition of your unvarying kindness to the artists, the polite and gentlemanly manner in which you conduct your business with us, and the promptness with which all your engagements are fulfilled; and we trust the benefit we tender you will not only enable us to testify in an acceptable form our personal esteem and friendship, but also afford the public an opportunity of recognizing your untiring efforts in its behalf as an operatic manager.

On behalf of myself and my fellow-artists,

I remain, my dear GRAU, yours sincerely,

F. BRIGNOLI.

REPLY OF J. GRAU.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 11, 1862.

MY DEAR BRIGNOLI: Your letter of yesterday's date, on behalf of yourself and the other artists now under engagement with me, tendering me a complimentary benefit, in token of your and their esteem and regard, on the close of the present New-York season, has taken me completely by surprise. So truly flattering and undeserved is the compliment which you have offered me, that it will ever be remembered as the one bright, green spot in my managerial career, and as such cherished by me.

During my long association with yourself and the artists who unite with you in this profer, I have never received anything from you but the most cordial cooperation in my endeavors to carry out such operatic seasons as I have been engaged in, and it is to yourself and them alone that I am indebted for the success I have achieved.

In the course of my somewhat lengthened managerial career, I have never sought, expected or received such a compliment as you have tendered me, and my first impulse was gratefully to decline the intended honor, for the simple reason that I had already received an all-sufficient recompense in the brilliant success of the season, which is now on the eve of termination, for which I am solely indebted to the energy, zeal, and loyalty of the artists engaged.

But on reflection I have arrived at the conclusion that the refusal of such a testimonial as you have so kindly proferred would not be reciprocating the kindly spirit in which it is tendered, and I therefore most gratefully accept the benefit you propose, and as Monday evening next is the only night on which it can take place prior to the commencement of the Philadelphia season, I respectfully suggest that evening.

Believe me, I am deeply sensible of the generous kindness manifested toward me by the artists, and it shall ever be borne in my most grateful remembrance.

I am, yours very sincerely, J. GRAU.

The programme for this event, which it will be seen comes off to-night, is as follows: the whole opera of "Ernani," with CORREA, BRIGNOLI, ARDITI, and Susini; the first act of "La Traviata," with GERRARDELLI; and an act of a grand opera for Madame Lorini and Signor MACFARLANE. The company appears in Philadelphia on Wednesday night, and will reopen the New-York Academy of Music on Monday, the 29th January, when we are glad to state Miss KELLOGG will make her rentrée.

The recurrence of benefit nights at the German Opera suggests that the season at that establishment is also drawing to a close. The announcements for this week are therefore of peculiar interest. To-night, for the first time here, will be played KREUTZER'S opera, "A Night in Granada;" on Wednesday "Fidelio" will be repeated, and on Friday, for the benefit of Mm. ROTTAU, "La Nozze de Figaro." Having the musical field almost exclusively to himself, it will be strange if Mr. ANSORGE'S meritorious enterprise does not receive a new impulse. To-night's opera is a popular one in Germany, and will undoubtedly attract a brilliant audience.

The announcements at the various theaters to-night are as follows: At WALLACK'S, O'KEEFE'S comedy of "Wild Oats;" at LAURA KEENE'S, the successful spectacle of "Blondette;" at the Winter Garden, Mr. and Mrs. BARNEY WILLIAMS, in three pieces, "Willie Reilly," "Customs of the Country," and "Pat's Blunders;" at NIBLO'S Garden, Mr. FOX as the "Broker of Bogota;" and at BARNUM'S Museum the very successful revival of BOUCICAULT'S "Colleen Bawn."

The success of Mr. MAX MARETZEK'S troupe at the Teatro de Tacon, Havana, seems to be very steadily on the increase. Change of climate and the indisposition consequent thereon interfered with the early triumphs of the artists, but they have since amply justified their European reputations. Since the departure of the last steamer, Mr. MARETZEK has given "La Traviata" and "Machetto." In the first-named work the tenor, MARIANI, says a correspondent, "was immense, and the public (which has been frightfully cold) is compelled to admit that in that part, at least, he is the greatest tenor that has ever been in Havana. In the fourth act his duet with VIOLETTA was something extraordinary, and such applause was never heard inside the walls of the theatre before. Mme. CARAZON and Signor BELLINI, the baritone, sang remarkably well, and were received with great applause, the opera being in all respects a great success. 'Macbeth' has been even more fortunate. It has created a great furore, and is, so far, the opera of the season. Although this work is written more for a baritone than a prima donna, still the part of Lady Macbeth was so magnificently sung by Mme. MARAI, that the public was quite wild with delight. In the finale of the first act, her great and powerful voice was heard to its proper advantage; and in the second act the 'Brulldse' was twice encored. At the end of each act Mme. MARAI was called before the curtain and received a perfect shower of wreaths, boquets, &c. Her fourth act was the crowning point of the opera. In the celebrated sleeping scene her acting was sublime, and so thoroughly intense that several persons who have seen RISTORI, say she even excels her. MARAI is without doubt the greatest dramatic prima donna now living. She has become the great favorite here, and will doubtless leave a name that will not easily be forgotten. The baritone BELLINI sang the difficult part of Macbeth remarkably well, far exceeding the expectations of the public. He reminds you of poor ANCONA in his good days. MEDINI, tenor, and BRAGA, basso, have very little to do in this opera; the whole four acts rest entirely upon the prima donna and baritone. It has already been played three times, and is considered strong enough for eight performances. Next week VERDI'S 'Un Ballo in Maschera' will be produced with MADORI, Salazar Tredici, Manzolini, Bellini, Bischi and Maffei. After that 'Jovo' (?) for the first time here."

Miss TERESA CARRENO, the child pianist, gave a successful matinée at Irving Hall on Saturday, being assisted thereat by Mrs. JENNY KENDRICK, Mr. WM. CARTER, Mr. THEODORE THOMAS, and Signor ARDITA as conductor. The little lady arrives at the advanced age of nine years on Monday next, and the event will be celebrated by a grand evening concert at the Academy of Music. A large number of artists will contribute their services to the occasion, which there is hardly a doubt will be brilliantly successful. Miss CARRENO will subsequently leave New-York for a tour in the Provinces.

M. JULIENNE'S excellent little French Theatre is doing well at Niblo's Saloon, and winning golden opinions from all sorts of people. During the week, the following pieces have been played: "La Jolie Fait Peure," "Croque Poule," "Un Gentilhomme Pauvre" and "La Plane de Berthe." The announcements for to-morrow night are, "Les Femmes qui Pleurent," "L'onde et l'ombre" and "Un Homme de Feu."

Signor ANTONIO BARILI—one of the most accomplished vocal teachers in the City—will give his first amateur concert of the season, this (Monday) evening, at Irving Hall. Signor BARILI and his pupils are the sole interpreters of the programme.

Mr. E. J. DE CORDOVA will deliver a humorous lecture at Niblo's Saloon on Thursday evening next. The subject is the harrowing one of "Mr. Stoggles' Boarding House,"—a theme which will assuredly appeal to the hearts and homes of all present.

The members of the "Arion Society" will give a grand vocal and instrumental concert to-morrow evening, at the German Opera-house. Madame JOHANNSEN, the grand orchestra of the establishment, Mr. S. B. MILLS, and other well-known talent will assist the Society.

An important addition will to-night be made to the troupe of minstrels now at the Palace Music Hall, corner of Sixth-avenue and Fourteenth-street, in the persons of the original BUCKLEYS' Serenaders, who have just returned from England. Miss JULIA GOULD, who will be remembered as a very agreeable concert singer, is also attached to the troupe.

The Brooklyn Philharmonic.

The second recurrence of the cheerful festival which all good Brooklynites delight to honor—we mean the Philharmonic reunion—took place on Saturday night in the gorgeous and Moorish Academical Temple on Montague-street. The building was crowded to its utmost capacity by Brooklyn's fairest maidens, young and old, and each of her gallant sons as are not at the seat of war.

The programme, which was rich and varied, opened with BEETHOVEN'S Symphony No. 1 in C Major, an ever-delightful composition, the andante movement of which was the gem of the evening. The symphony was excellently played by the orchestra, and received all the applause bestowed by the attentive audience.

The other orchestral pieces were MEYERBEER'S "Struensee," which, filled with melody and feeling, is ever popular, and MENDELSSOHN'S overture, "Ruy Blas," for which all true philharmonicities entertain the most absolute affection. Both were rendered effectively under the skillful guidance of Mr. THOMAS' baton. This, by the way, was the first concert given under the lead of Mr. THOMAS, who henceforth alternates with Mr. ERTEL on the conductor's platform. Mr. THOMAS' ability in every department of art, whether as a conductor of Italian opera or as the exponent of the recondite music of the great masters, has been so steadily recognized in New-York that we watch with interest the career which he has clearly hewn out for himself. Brooklyn is fortunate in having procured the cooperation of a conductor so energetic and well-informed as Mr. THOMAS, who, upon his entrance on Saturday night, was greeted with friendly applause.

The Directors of the Brooklyn Philharmonic are not dietists, they prepare always ample and extended bills of sumptuous fare for the delight of the subscribers whose appetite, ever insatiable, regularly insists upon a second performance of every piece.

At the second concert Mme. D'ANGRI, Miss TERESA CARRENO and the Teutonia Choral Society assisted, and we understand, Miss KELLOGG, Mlle. CORINNA, SUSINI, BRIGNOLI and CAPPELLONI, would have severally appeared, had there been time for their services and its repetition before the dawn of Sabbath.

As it was, TERESA CARRENO created a sensation in THALBERG'S "Fantasia sur Norma," which she gave with an exactness, facility and extraordinary power which, in others, would be wonderful, and which, in a child as yet unable to reach the ordinary pedal with her toes, approaches the miraculous. The little wonder was encored, and despite her evident weariness, gratified the desire of the audience, as indeed she did again about to venture midnight, in her rendering of WEBER'S "Perlen, Sweet Home."

The Teutonia Glee Club sang well and deserved the encore, which, of course, they received, and Mad. D'ANGRI, who was in excellent voice and spirits and a very yellow dress, fairly excited a furore which merited the double encore which she graciously acknowledged.

The concert was a great success. Everybody from the paternal President to the vociferous programme distributor, in buttons, from the beaming mild-eyed Directors in managerial box to the chattering school-girls and their time-keeping beaux, everybody was in the most choice and paternal mood, happy in the brilliant house, happy in the familiar gathering, happy in the superb programme, and yet more happy in the doubly successful outcarrying of the performance as originally planned.

The following orchestral pieces will be rehearsed for the third concert: Symphony, No. 4, Op. 60, in A major, MENDELSSOHN; Overture, Scherzo and Finale, SCHUMANN; Overture, "Robespierre," LISZT.

INTERNATIONAL RELIEF COMMITTEE.
TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.
AN APPEAL FOR THE SUFFERING OPERATIVES OF GREAT BRITAIN.
The blow struck at the manufacture of cotton has fallen heavily upon the operatives of Europe, and it is announced to us that in England there is unusual suffering and a year of scarcity.
"The agony of Lancashire," says the London Times, "is every day becoming more acute, and before the Winter is ended the sufferings of the people will prove the greatest national trial that we have had since the Irish famine."
When the Irish famine prevailed in 1847 the American people, from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, gladly moved of their abundance to succor the starving. Ships were dispatched for the food; the British Government furnished facilities for its distribution; and the Queen, whose virtues fully illustrate her words, recognized the Christian character of the act.
Again we are called upon in the name of humanity to relieve men, women and children, who are as innocent, without fault of their own, to share more fearful misery than was. The appeal comes to those to whom God in His Providence has been most bountiful. Amid all the blessings He has permitted us to enjoy in the defense of Home and liberty and constitutional freedom, a darkness of illness has had no place; and despite the wickedness of an army of citizens to protect the liberties of the Republic, the income of those who continued have been so plentifully blessed that America is able, from her surplus, to succor largely in other countries.
Let us not be unmindful at this moment of the responsibilities imposed upon us by the munificence of the Ruler of nations, nor permit our prayers and gratitude in food to us to forget, or in our surfeit, the peculiar duties that belong to our position. Our northern States, which cover over a wide and fertile territory, as yet thinly populated, have made our land one of the granaries, in which the nations of Europe that subsist chiefly by manufactures now look for food; and the operatives of Lancashire have generally depended on Southern States, have more than ever occasion for American corn.

DISPATCHES FROM WASHINGTON.

The Destination of the Banks Expedition.

Its Field of Operations in the Department of the Gulf.

MOBILE TO BE ATTACKED AT ONCE.

Probable Return of General Butler to the North.

The Character of Saturday's Battle.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Dec. 14.

THE DESTINATION OF GEN. BANKS.

Since the Banks Expedition sailed away into Southern waters, a very visible disappointment has depressed the hopes of those who believe Richmond the goal at which all blows should now be aimed. Having as it did, almost simultaneously with the advance of the Army of the Potomac, it was regarded as certain that the next news would tell us of a grand check movement which must render of no avail the elaborate preparations made for the defence of the rebel capital.

Now that events are on the eve of removing the veil which has so long shrouded this enterprise in mystery, no mischief can result from gratifying the public desire as to its object. The readers of the Times will recollect our previous cautious statement in regard to the delays in getting it ready, (which were made a subject for complaint against the Quartermaster's Department,) as well as our recent announcement that Gov. HAMILTON, of Texas, accompanied it when it sailed. Too delays showed that the intention of the Government was to have dispatched it at a much earlier period, with regard to the operations in Virginia, and the presence of Gov. HAMILTON is a circumstance that needs no comment.

We have long had ample authority for believing that the expedition was destined to operate in the Department of the Gulf. We are now permitted to say that its objects are to embrace all the interests of that Department; and that after the lapse of a short period, and the accomplishment of certain important ends, Gen. BANKS will relieve Gen. BUTLER in his command, and the latter will return to the North.

The causes for this change in commanders cannot now fully be given. The announcements heretofore from made in this column in regard to the action of foreign Governments adverse to Gen. BUTLER, and the difficulties arising between that officer and the citizens of certain not over-friendly European Powers, are understood to have resulted in a demand for his removal; and yet this demand was followed, rather than influenced, the Government in a determination originating in other causes.

The occupation of Mobile will be one of the earliest fruits of this augmentation of force in the Department; and no one can doubt that Gen. BANKS will lose no time and spare no effort to rid Texas of the handful of rebels that control that State; and if, after his return, the change shall result in the placing of Gen. BUTLER in some position here, where his brain and steadfast will can influence the whole machinery of the war, the country will indeed have cause for gratitude for the transfer.

THE CHARACTER OF SATURDAY'S BATTLE.

Accounts received here of yesterday's battle at Fredericksburgh leave no question that it was the most terrific artillery combat ever fought in the world. An officer of high rank, who was witness of the spectacle, states that the number of pieces of ordnance employed on both sides amounted to several hundred, and under such circumstances it cannot be doubted that the list of casualties is very large. But little the battle was actually seen, by reason of the dense smoke that enveloped the whole field. It is only known in general, that the Union forces fought with all the odds immensely against them, and that, crowded into a narrow space which gave the enemy's guns most deadly effect, with a deep river on one side and the hostile fortifications on the other, they maintained the unequal fight with unflinching heroism, till night closed upon the scene and terminated the terrible conflict. At this point the advantage on the whole rested with our army.

The accounts which are permitted to reach the public are meager and confused, and the result is differently estimated, as the witnesses differ in temper and desire. Your correspondent has conversed with numerous parties, of equal opportunities for judging, but whose opinions are widely apart, and has been able to learn the general information in possession of Government, and the conclusions of our highest military authorities, and he believes, from a careful collection of the facts at hand, that the result, if not all that we can desire, is still such as in no sense to justify the evil augeries which it has caused. Only a portion of our troops were engaged, or could be, for want of space. They are in the best of spirits, and entirely confident of success when the battle shall be renewed. That it was not renewed to-day, is probably owing to the near approach of the reserves, which can successfully turn the enemy's left flank, and cooperate in a victory, not only more certain, but less bloody, than could have resulted from a continuance of operations on the front alone. We may set down the action of Saturday as a reconnoissance in force, and confidently count, if our troops can be so disposed that they can generally be brought into action, on a decisive success to-morrow, or whenever the strength of the army can be brought to bear on the enemy.

The censure here to-night of the military authorities, for permitting the large force of Gen. BURNSIDE to be taken to a remote field of operations at a moment when its presence might be needed to secure the complete success, as their absence may cause the partial failure, of the present effort to crush the army of LEE, is universal and severe. Even if the army of the Potomac shall achieve the triumph in its present struggle, which we believe it will, the sending off of this force at the present juncture will not fail to be regarded by the public of Washington, at least, as an incomparable blunder.

Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND, with a large staff of surgeons, went down to Aquia Creek last evening to superintend in person the arrangements for the transportation and care of the wounded. Every possible precaution has been made for the impending battle by the Medical Department, including an ample force of surgeons of all points where their services will be needed. Dr. LO FRANCIS, Medical Director of the Army of the Potomac, telegraphs that he has all the surgeons he can do at present. The wounded soldiers are reported on their way here, and we are informed that sufficient buildings for hospital purposes have been found in Fredericksburgh and Falmouth, and that our wounded have been well cared for.

INCIDENTS AT FREDERICKSBURGH.

During the fighting on Friday at Fredericksburgh, Rev. ANSON D. FITLIN, chaplain of the Sixteenth Massachusetts regiment, and well known as the army correspondent of the Boston Journal, got permission to take the musket of a sick soldier, and joining in a charge, was shot dead. It is stated, upon the authority of an eye witness, that during Friday's fight that after two brigades—one of them Gen. Meagher's—had been repulsed in an attack, a regiment carrying the Massachusetts flag made a charge and carried and held the position contended for.

SECRETARY CHASE'S SCHEME.

The Committee of Ways and Means, believing that Secretary CHASE best understands his own scheme of finance, have addressed him a letter requesting that he will frame a bill which shall embody his ideas. The committee was actuated in this request by a desire to give the Secretary an opportunity of stating exactly what legislation he desires, and he is now preparing his reply, which, when received, will form a basis for future action.

THE PORTER COURT-MARTIAL.

Gen. McDOWELL continued his testimony before the Porter Court-martial yesterday. His testimony is considered more damaging to Gen. POPE than anything which has yet developed itself. McDOWELL testifies that on the morning of the 29th he was marching his corps from Manassas to Gainesville. POPE was ahead of him, when they reached Bethlehem Church, where the road forked. POPE'S corps and one brigade of McDOWELL'S passed on toward the Warrenton Turnpike McDOWELL rode to the front of POPE'S Corps, and saw a column of dust rising ahead some few miles distant, and on skirmishers exchanging shots with rebel pickets while they were coming up this road. POPE said to McDOWELL, "You rank me, and must take command." The joint order, directing them to move in the enemy's rear, had been received, and POPE said to McDOWELL, "We cannot go any further without getting into a fight." McDOWELL replied, "Well, that's what we came here for." After talking the matter over, he ordered POPE to go in at once, while he went up the Sudley Spring road to join the main body of the army. He there left him, rode back, put his own troops on the road, watched until the most of them had gone on, and then rode to the head of his own corps. On his way he met the aide, with the order of POPE, dated 4:30 P. M., for POPE to attack on their right flank and rear at once. This was in effect the same order he had given POPE before he had left him, and he supposed POPE would proceed to execute it at once. This order of POPE'S was to use artillery.

Q.—From what you know of the country, could POPE have executed the order?

A.—If he had attempted to have executed it, even without artillery, and had been defeated, it would have required so much force from the enemy's front as to have relieved POPE, where the main attack was going on, and which would have been a decided advantage to the Union forces. McDOWELL, after leaving POPE, marched six miles and attacked the enemy in front, fighting an hour before the battle ended.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Senator LANE, of Kansas, will to-morrow introduce a joint resolution authorizing the Commissioners of Indian Affairs to treat with the Indian tribes in Kansas for their removal from the State, and the extinguishment of the titles to their lands.

FEELING HERE TOWARD ENGLAND.

At the lecture recently given here by JOHN B. GOUGH, on "London," the evidences of sentiment drawn forth from a large and most intelligent audience, were singular and instructive. While the most marked displeasure was manifested at the conduct of the British Government toward this country, that displeasure was clearly not a blind prejudice against the English race: for the mention of the Queen, as well as allusions to the people, drew forth enthusiastic applause. But there was no mistaking the fact that the aristocracy which govern both people and Queen, have laid up wrath against the day of wrath, whenever it may be in the power of the communities represented in this audience—a really representative one—to repay the debt which has so recklessly been contracted since the commencement of the rebellion.

ANOTHER EXCHANGE OF STATE PRISONERS.

It is said that Mr. WOOD, Superintendent of the Old Capitol Prison, will be dispatched to Richmond in the course of a few days, to negotiate a further exchange of our State Prisoners, many of whom are rotting in the rebel dungeons in Richmond and Salisbury, N. C.

THE PIRATE ALABAMA.

It is stated that the Navy Department, some time during the coming week, will dispatch several more steamers in search of the Alabama. The Secretary of the Navy, when he learned that the pirate had succeeded in eluding the vigilance of the San Jacinto in the harbor of Martinique, became very indignant.

MORE SICK SENT NORTH.

About five hundred patients from the different military hospitals here, were sent to Philadelphia to-day. The vacant beds in that city will be filled with patients from the hospitals here, in order to make as much room as possible, and to prepare for any emergency that may arise. The vacant beds in the hospitals here now number about six thousand, which will be further increased during the coming week.

RETURN OF SURGEON-GENERAL HAMMOND.

Surgeon-General HAMMOND returned here Saturday morning from Philadelphia, where he went to examine into the affairs of the Medical Purveying Department in that city, which, of late, have been conducted in a very loose manner. He found that the former Medical Purveyor there, Dr. COOPER, U. S. A., had been guilty of receiving bribes, and of other dishonest and dishonorable practices. It is the intention of the Surgeon-General to change the whole system on which the business of the Medical Purveying Department is conducted, and instead of buying from dealers who charge their own prices, to have all articles except drugs furnished by contract.

PROPOSALS FOR OATS AND HAY.

Col. RUCKER, Dépôt Quartermaster here, invites proposals, until the 20th instant, for furnishing the Government with 400,000 bushels of oats and 3,000 tons of hay, to be delivered in Washington within twenty-five days from the date of contract. The oats must weigh 32 pounds to the bushel, and the hay 2,000 pounds to the ton.

EXPERIMENTS WITH NEW PROJECTILES.

Experiments of a most interesting character are being made daily at the Navy Yard here, with various new projectiles. The results obtained with a new torpedo, are described by those who have witnessed the experiments, as being most extraordinary and unexpected. It is said that this last invention has been adopted by the Navy Department, and will immediately be introduced into the service. At a long range, these terrible missiles, will blow to atoms the strongest iron-clad vessel now afloat.

CLEARING OUT THE HOSPITALS.

The hospitals here are being cleared as rapidly as possible of their inmates, who are being sent, at the rate of five hundred a day, to the Northern cities. Five hundred were sent to Philadelphia to-day, and the same number will be sent to New-York to-morrow.

CAPT. GREEN.

CAPT. J. H. GREEN, better known as the "Reformed Gambler," and now an officer in an Indiana Regiment, is here on leave of absence, and is being strongly urged by prominent citizens of his native for promotion, with a view of being attached to the staff of Gen. Jerr. C. Davis. Capt. Green personally possesses very respectable claims to this promotion, and the President has endorsed his application.

CARE OF THE WOUNDED.

The Sanitary Commission sent a vessel, to-day, to Aquia Creek, with surgeons, nurses and hospital stores for the wounded in the recent battles.

IMPORTANT FROM NASHVILLE.

A Dashing Enterprise—The Rebels Driven Out of Franklin—Destruction of Flouring Mills—Distribution of the Rebel Forces, &c.

NASHVILLE, Friday, Dec. 12, 1862.

Brigadier-Gen. D. S. STANLEY returned this evening from a dashing enterprise into Dixie. He left our front yesterday by the Franklin Pike with a strong force of cavalry, and disturbed the enemy early in the day, fighting a considerable cavalry force, and driving them across roads. After he had bivouacked he intended to surprise Franklin, but during the night he was discovered, and finding a surprise impracticable, he made a dash at Franklin this morning, and was sharply resisted by the enemy shooting from the houses. Major-Gen. WRIGHT, commanding the Seventh Pennsylvania cavalry, charged brilliantly through the town, and drove the Rebels clear out. After destroying flouring mills and other property useful to the Rebel army, the expedition, satisfied with the reconnoissance, returned, losing only one man. Five Rebels, including one lieutenant were killed, ten wounded, twelve were taken prisoners, and a large drove of secesh horses captured.

It was discovered that there is no large force of rebels in far west as Franklin. There is a heavy force of Rebels near Waterville, another near Mount Pleasant, and a good force at and this side of Steward's Creek. There was no enemy at Lebanon. The guerrilla MORGAN is slashing about promiscuously with 5,000 men. The enemy is waiting an attack. All is quiet in front. The Gregonian reports 120,000 rebels this side of the Tennessee River. It is ascertained that the railway bridges are passable for trains, and the enemy are fortifying at Bridgeport. There is no force at Chattanooga. Their entire force does not exceed 70,000. The Murfreesboro (rebel) Banner of yesterday admits a loss at Hartsville, in two rebel regiments, of over 60 men. BRAGG sent 1,792 paroled Union prisoners to our lines, yesterday, mostly captured at Hartsville.

NASHVILLE, Sunday, Dec. 14.

The Murfreesboro Rebel Banner of Saturday says "President JEFF. DAVIS" arrived there on Friday. BRAGG reviewed HARDEE'S corps there the same day. JEFF. DAVIS reviews it again to-morrow.

Gen. ROSECRANS sent a flag of truce yesterday with a verification of prisoners' rolls. Maj. CLARENCE PERKINS was the Rebel flag-officer. He desired us to notify his father, the editor of the Louisville Journal, that he was well, fat, ragged, saucy and rebellious. While the flag was waiting for an answer, a party of Rebels violated it by capturing our vedettes on the road. Gen. ROSECRANS protested indignantly to-day, and the prisoners will be returned to-morrow.

Recent dispatches about the rebels menacing battle at Hartsville are ridiculous. Their main body extends from Nolansville to Murfreesboro. FORREST'S whereabouts is unknown. Most of WOODWARD'S Cavalry have disbanded. That the rebels threaten decisive battle at Stewart's Creek is doubtful. There is no rebel force at Lebanon.

Recent dispatches, announcing strange revelations against Gen. McCOOK, in the Buell Military Commission, are untrue. It is admitted that BUELL displays consummate address in his defence. McCOOK'S testimony against him is damaging.

Important movements are expected soon, and the recent delays will be satisfactorily explained.

Rebel officers with the flag of truce say that the affair last Wednesday was a battle, not a skirmish. They lost 100 men.

Gov. JOHNSON'S assessment of wealthy rebels of $60,000 for the relief of the poor, causes high-toned grief. It is only the first installment. Brig.-Gen. W. S. SMITH is relieved from the command of NELSON'S old division by Gen. PALMER. He takes command of the cavalry under STANLEY.

NEW-JERSEY.

NEW-JERSEY TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—Much good to the cause of education has been effected in New-Jersey, as well as in other States, by means of the State and County Teachers' Associations, at the meetings of which the views and experience of those engaged in teaching are interchanged, and by the operation of many minds looking to a common end, a more enlightened and harmonious system of teaching is secured than could otherwise be hoped for. The next annual meeting of the State Teachers' Association of New-Jersey will be held at Bridgton, beginning on Monday, the 29th inst., and continuing until the 31st. Among the subjects which will be brought before the Association will be "Normal Schools," "The School Laws of New-Jersey," "Report of Prof. PHELPS, Principal of the State Normal School, upon the Course of Study best Suited to the Objects of the Public Schools of the State," "Object Teaching," &c. Preparations will be made by the citizens of Bridgton to entertain strangers, and it is expected the meeting will be one of unusual interest.

IMPORTANT SEIZURE UNDER THE TAX LAW.—An important seizure, being the first under the Internal Revenue Act, was made on Friday, at Union Hill, Hudson County, by U. S. Deputy Marshal BENJAMIN, under instructions from D. M. WILSON, Collector of the Fifth District of New-Jersey, of the Brewery, including all the vats, stills, tubs, machinery and stock on hand of every description, belonging to DANIEL BERGEN. The seizure was made under the provisions of the General Tax Law, which imposes a penalty of forfeiture of property, and a fine of five hundred dollars and costs for failure to take out a license, give bonds, make monthly returns, &c., as required by the law.

PANAMA.

No Mail Arrivals From the South—Quiet in Panama—War Vessels in the Harbor—The Late Gale at Aspinwall, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Friday, Dec. 5, 1862.

We have had no mail arrivals from any of the Spanish American States since my last, except the Panama Railroad Company's steamship Salvador, from Central America. Our usual mail from Bogota and the interior, which was due last night at Aspinwall, failed on account of the late loss of the steamer Avon. In this State all is quiet. The State Convention met at Panama last Saturday, to confirm the appointment of Señor DIAZ as Provisional Governor, to frame a new Constitution, and to order elections for Governor and Congressmen.

We have a large fleet of war-ships now in the harbor. The French have four—the Pallas, Galathée, Cornelie and Diamant, all bound for Acapulco; the United States four—the flag-ship Lancaster, St. Marys, Cyane and Narragansett; the British have the frigate Tartar in the bay. The stores on the store-ship Warren have all been placed on shore, for the reason that the vessel is leaky, and she is advertised to be sold at auction. Lieut. POLLOCK, her commander, and Assistant Acting Paymaster BROWN, have been ordered home. About forty of the Narragansett's men go home to-day on the Champion. In Aspinwall the United States has no war-vessel, the Bainbridge having lost her battery in the late gale. What is needed in that port is a small steamer of two or four guns, which can cruise between there and San Juan del Norte, Cartagena, Savanilla, Barranquilla, Santa Marta, &c., and which in case of need can help vessels in distress off the port or at the Islands in the Carribbean. A sailing vessel is of no use there. The British corvette Jason still remains at Aspinwall. The United States steam-frigate Saranac was at Manzanillo, Mexico, on the 25th of November, for Guaymas soon.

The stranded British brig Bolivar is to be sold at auction in Aspinwall to-morrow. The specie $1,200,000, and all the freight has been taken out of the stranded steamer Avon, and such of the latter as will not do to reship, has been resold. A good deal of indigo, damaged, will be reshipped. The wreck will be sold, after the Company strips it.

The flood over the railroad track subsided in time for the passengers from New-York, by the Champion, to pass over without detention; but at 7 o'clock in the evening the first freight train for California ran off the track six miles from Pama, detaining the passenger train on the rails till 2 o'clock in the morning. Four cars with passengers' baggage, mails, and express of WELLS, FARGO & Co. ran off, and was turned completely over, but I believe no great damage was done to property. The road is now in good order, and it being time for the dry season to set in, we shall probably have no further trouble.

A mason by the name of CORNELIUS MCCAULIFF, a New-York Irishman working for the Panama Railroad, was killed on Wednesday, by one of the men of the Avon striking him a single blow with his fist. MCCAULIFF interfered in a quarrel, and got the blow for his pains; but it appears it was quite accidental, as the Avon man was hitting at another person at the time.

Newspapers and letters, which contain no news of interest, are up to the last of November from Central America. All was quiet.

The Salvador brought for Southampton 1,223 serroons of indigo, 1 case vanilla, and $31,799 in specie; for Liverpool, 2 serroons indigo, 24 sacks coffee, some hides, skins, etc.

The International Relief Fund.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Much difference of opinion appears to exist as to the form in which this noble charity can most advantageously be bestowed. Some urge that money cannot judiciously be sent, on account of the high rate of exchange; others, that it is almost useless to send corn and meal, as being a kind of food to which the sufferers are totally unaccustomed, and to which they cannot readily adapt themselves.

It strikes me that both these difficulties are, in a great degree, imaginary.

When foreign exchange rises, the prices of exports do not remain stationary, but advance in proportion. Any unusual difference must very soon be equalized by shipments. No law of trade is better established than this; but for the discussion that has arisen, it might have been supposed that none was more familiar among New-York shipping merchants. The relative advantages of gold and grain or flour, as a remittance, must be the same now, with exchange at 145, as when it is at 110.

As to the form in which the contributions should originally be collected, I do not see why that may not be left to the convenience of the donors, without restriction, provided some of the respectable organizations connected with the movement, in one or more of the seaports through which these offerings will mainly flow, be allowed to exercise their discretion as to the shipment of articles supplied, or their sale and remittance of the proceeds. Or, a like discretion might be granted to the Liverpool consignees of the shipments, or to the local Committees in the suffering districts, who are thoroughly informed as to the needs of the people, and can best decide upon the most appropriate means of relief. If this plan be acted upon, then those who find it more convenient to make their offering in corn can still do so, with the assurance that they will not be throwing away their bounty.

As for the objections that this movement is unnecessary; that it may be misinterpreted, or ungratefully received; and that there is abundant scope for charity at home; they scarcely need refutation among a liberal-hearted, magnanimous people. True charity is world-embracing. If to be limited to one's own nationality, why not to one's own State or province, country, town, village, household or individual self? Few Americans, however, will be found to take any such narrow view of the matter. I trust rather to see this truly philanthropic enterprise assume yet wider and grander proportions. The distress has been but feebly pictured in the brief accounts which have been published here. From £40,000 to £60,000 a week are already being distributed in Lancashire and Cheshire, and this is totally insufficient for even present needs, while the extent of the destitution is rapidly increasing. Let the succor, then, from this side be on a scale, proportionate alike to the vastness of the misery to be relieved, and to the noble impulses which animate the American heart, whenever it receives an appeal from suffering humanity! Let the churches throughout the land signalize that day, which should always be suggestive and promotive of peace and good-will among men, by collecting a grand Christ-

It occurs to me, also, that the liberal newspaper subscribers of New-York are very generally old enough to have seen, by having an extra half-cent, with the rebellion and cotton, will been made known here, of the cotton and corn of the country. The English papers have made quite material for such a presentation of the case, and it could not fail to give a great stimulus to charitable impulse and effort. E. W. S.

THE ORPHANS OF SOLDIERS.

Meeting to Establish Schools for the Children of Deceased Soldiers.

A meeting of the Society called, rather awkwardly, the Institute of Reward, was held, on Friday evening, Dec. 12, 1862, at the Bible House, to receive the report of the Corresponding Secretary, DAVID P. HOLMES, M. D.

In the absence of the President, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, the Chair was taken by Rev. SAMUEL D. DENNIS.

Since the month of July, Dr. HOLMES has been visiting the Western States, with the view of engaging the interest of the people generally in the objects of the Institute, and especially of inducing them to an immediate acceptance, through their Legislatures, of the land appropriated by the last Congress for agricultural purposes, for the purpose of establishing orphan homes, upon the experimental farms that may be attached to the Agricultural Colleges contemplated in the Bill of July 2, 1862. Dr. HOLMES has visited all the loyal Western States except Minnesota, and, also, Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, in all of which, with a single exception, he found the Governors in the highest degree favorable to the labors of the Institute and to its plan of thus appropriating to the use of patriot orphans a share of the National bounty. Not only in St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, and the chief cities of the West, have meetings been held, but many smaller towns and villages have been visited, with the intention of familiarizing the people with the fact of the appropriation of land, the imperative necessities of the orphans, and the value of the opportunity presented for doing them good. Throughout his tour, Dr. HOLMES has to acknowledge the generous sympathy and cordial action of our fellow-citizens of the West. Governors, editors and private individuals have shown a degree of interest and appreciation of our efforts in the highest degree encouraging. Petitions for the acceptance of the land appropriation, drawn in accordance with the law, at the instance of the Institute, were widely circulated and numerously signed, and committees have been appointed for organizing auxiliary societies. It was Dr. HOLMES'S good fortune to visit the camps of the Union forces at various points as far to the southwest as Corinth, Mississippi, and he found among officers and men such an appreciation of the efforts of the Institute, as to leave no doubt as to the degree of earnestness with which its objects should be pursued.

Dr. HOLMES was happy to inform the members that some college scholarships and homes had been already offered to the Institute for the benefit of the objects of its care. It is his purpose soon to visit all the New England States.

The Chairman hoped to see the same enthusiasm, and the same appreciation of the claims of our soldiers' orphans, which characterizes our zealous Corresponding Secretary, abundantly displayed by the members of the Institute and the public at large.

Dr. MACGOWAN, the distinguished missionary from China, upon being introduced, remarked that it was impossible for one who had had any experience of European pauperism, who had studied its causes and known its terrible effect upon the social body, not to seek in every manner to deliver his own country from its evils. He sees in a politico-economical view the strongest argument for the importance of the Institute's labors, the fact that it is a great preventive of pauperism; giving, not as alms, but as a recompense for a father's patriotic death, a home and a profession, if need be, to his orphan child.

J. W. REMSEN, M. D., could not refrain from expressing the sense of the obligations under which he was laid by Dr. HOLMES'S report, and could not forget the fact, which must be patent to all, viz.: that the demoralizing effect of war, against which we were always to contend, already called for our earnest action by all the means in our power, to rescue and provide for the orphans of the Republic.

A vote of thanks was offered to Dr. HOLMES, and also to Dr. MACGOWAN, when the meeting adjourned.

—Gov. Reeder of Pennsylvania, positively declines to become a candidate for the United States Senate.]
